Library offers wealth of ideas for students preparing for Science Fairs

It's February, that short month of dark and cold made even more dreaded because it's Science Fair time. Of course, being Feb. 1 (the day before Ground Hog Day), you have plenty of time to rush into the library, grab two books on your subject and home to build a project. Doesn't this sound easy?

The tough part of science projects is getting the idea, so if this is what's got you stumped, the library is the place to start.

Discover magazine and Scientific America are good titles to get ideas for projects.

As well, a few new books have arrived which bring some fresh ideas to science projects. Some of the books are designed for teachers so students will get the inside scoop and home-schoolers can also appreciate them.

Drop in and look for one of the following titles:

- Getting Started in Science Fairs: from Planning to Judging
- Exploring Matter with Toys
- Teaching Physics with Toys
- Teaching Chemistry with Toys
- Shells, Whales, & Fish Tails
- Seeds, Flowers & Trees
- Moths, Butterflies, Other Insects, & Spiders
- Homemade Lightning

YRAP dinner

Is there a more romantic, fun-filled and delightful way to spend Valentine's Day with your beloved, than with candlelight and wine, music, a gourmet dinner and dancing to a live band?

The Friends of the York Region Abuse Program have organized an evening filled with all the right ingredients, to be held on Friday, Feb. 14 at Le Parc, Hwy 7, in Thornhill/Markham. For the past 10 years, YRAP has treated adults and children who have experienced childhood sexual abuse.

For further information and to order tickets, which are $100 per person, call Kathryn Winning, YRAP board of directors chair, at 477-2343.
