Unsafe and annoying to put on signal light after turning corner

DRL's, you can simply put on your low-beams every time you start the car. Soon it will be just as much of a habit as buckling up your seatbelt.

You should also pay attention to your turn indicators - they are not optional equipment, despite the fact that many people rarely use them.

To be effective, you should turn on your signals well before you actually get to the point where you're turning. It's annoying, and unsafe, to the vehicle behind you to signal while you're at a corner and already beginning your turn.
