Bentley picks the Liberals to win

■ From page 1 ■

Bentley's a True Grit.
Bentley who tops the Canadian-bacon scales at 70 pounds and lives in Musselman's Lake was accompanied by his owner Gail Ridgway.

The pig stepped into the cafe armed with a mission: Bentley came to vote.

Tribune reporter Joan Ransberry read the rules: There'd be no funny business and no chance for a re-count. Cafe owners Ross and Wendy Cowie placed four political party cookies in a row on the floor. Bentley was let loose and the race was on.

When word got out that an unidentified someone was about to exercise his franchise, the candidates re-arranged their campaign itinerary, gathered up supporters, made a B-line to Stouffville and, in true campaign style, vied for Bentley's vote. While the candidates didn't know on arrival that the designated voter was a pig, PC John Andersen didn't bat an eye. Andersen's a journalist - he's seen it all. New Democrat Wynne Harkvixsen was the most honest. She admitted she'd never met a pig. While Liberal standbearer Bryon Wilfert held his cards close to the vest, it's doubtful that he's had any experience with pigs. Wilfert changed his tune as soon as Bentley devoured the Liberal cookie.

Reformer Ed Sarafian arrived 30 minutes late. Bentley forgave him. The two shook hands. Despite political differences, Ed and Bentley are now the best of friends.

Whitchurch-Stouffville Chamber of Commerce president Helene Johnson tried to be objective. She fooled no one. When Bentley let out a terrible squeal, it was feared that he'd bit a New Democrat. Johnson was caught smiling.

After the vote, Bentley admitted: it was a tough choice. "Not only are the candidates good sports, they're nice people," said Bentley.
