Money managers make their mark

Signy Lawson and Carol Clements of Money Concepts celebrated five years of doing business in Stouffville by qualifying for the Chairman's Club, an internationally recognized designation awarded for outstanding business development.

The partners offer financial planning strategies for individuals and companies, supplying advice on everything from everyday money management techniques to investments and estate planning. In February, Money Concepts' founder, in conjunction with 91 franchisees across Canada, bought out the American interest in the company, giving them a much stronger voice in the organization's future direction.

Lawson and Clements are now responsible for managing more than $45 million and attribute their success to their clients. "They are great and are very willing to trust our judgement and capabilities," said Clements. "They are also great at spreading the word. I guess that's the benefit of a small town."

The partners also appreciate the hard work of their three administrators - Sandy Parsons, Deborah MacDonald and Stephanie Burch.
