Beat Oprah at reading game

- She's Come Undone*, by Wally Lamb
- Songs in Ordinary Time*, by Mary McGarry Morris
- Book of Ruth*, by Jane Hamilton
- Stones in the River*, by Ursula Hegi
- Song of Solomon*, by Toni Morrison
- A Lesson Before Dying*, by Ernest J. Gaines
- The Heart of a Woman*, by Maya Angelou

What do these books have in common? These are all titles from Oprah's Book Club. It's an interesting mix of stories, yet all are very popular items in the library. Thanks Oprah!

This one program has reached more people and has encouraged reading as a means of leisure entertainment better than any library program.

These books have gone through long lists of reserves and are waiting for anyone who has missed these titles the first time around.

These books have been published over quite a few years, from 1977 to 1995, so it could be that some sound familiar to you, but don't let that stop you from reserving a title or two. A good book is always good to read a second time.

You can always set up your own book club at home with a few friends. Read the book, have a little snack, and get into a fun discussion.

After all, Oprah had a pajama party with Maya Angelou to discuss her book.

Getting a few friends together for a snacks and a book discussion should be easy. Stop by the library and pick a book, any book. There are lots to choose from in the stacks.

Maybe you'll even discover the next Oprah book before her book club.

It's almost time for Cranberries and Popcorn Craft Sale

The sixth annual Cranberries and Popcorn Craft Sale and Show will be held Saturday, Nov. 1 at the Latham Hall on Park Drive in Stouffville.

Among the items you can expect to find at the sale are old-fashioned wooden marble rollers for children, teddy bears of all sorts, metal accents, monogrammed sleepwear, quilts, preserves and garlic food products, and many Christmas crafts, decorating and gifts.

As well, shoppers can fill up on homemade soup, pizza, pie and hot apple cider for lunch.

The sale will run from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and admission is $1. A donation will be made from the proceeds of this sale to the annual Christmas Dinner held at the Stouffville Country Market.
