Principals face choice April 1

York Region's public school board wants its principals and vice-principals to rest easy

School administrators face a difficult choice by April 1 — returning to full-time teaching or keeping their posts without their union membership.

Ontario's Education Quality Improvement Act is responsible for the change.

The board, which hosted a symposium on the situation last Friday, is forming a committee to look at service contracts and other issues facing principals and vice-principals, Education Director Bill Hogarth said this week.

"They will not see any of their compensation or benefits adversely affected," if they choose to remain in their positions, Hogarth promised the board.

"They can rest assured they can continue with the fine work they are doing in our schools."

Hogarth said the board will continue to protect its school administrators for personal liability.
