

Same management for 2,000 years

MUSICAL MAGIC

A Stouffville Christmas Concert and Carol Sing, which took place Sunday evening at Christ Church Anglican, was so successful that organizers are planning to hold afternoon and evening concerts next year.

Presented by the Clock Tower Theatre

Committee (see photo below), the concert featured the combined choirs of Christ Church, St. James Presbyterian Church and Stouffville United Church, along with a mini orchestra and soloists Adam Rochacewicz on violin and Laura Rochacewicz on piano. One of the many highlights of the evening was 'Have You Heard the Story?' sung in barbershop style by the male choirs.

doing business across the borders and there were about a hundred women from Canada, chosen from several hundred applicants.

I was asked to go down as a mentor and it was a very successful trip.

I met a lot of people and forged a lot of new relationships. One of the things that came out of it was the fact that I, along with three of my associates, am going to be writing a humorous book on the pitfalls of being in business and the experiences that women specifically have been subject to when they start to expand their businesses.

Part of the proceeds from the book will be used to fund workshops for young women in business. Schleese's husband, Jochen Schleese, who is co-owner of the company, was named Business Entrepreneur of the Year by the Whitechurch-Stouffville Chamber of Commerce in 1997 and Schleese Saddlery Services was nominated for the Ontario Chamber of Commerce Outstanding Business Achievement Award.

SIGN OF THE TIMES

Messages on the sign outside the Stouffville Missionary Church at the east end of Main St. are often witty as well as wise. The following was spotted in early December: 'We have been under the same management for the past 2,000 years.'

JOAN HITS JACKPOT

Tribune reporter Joan Ransberry recently received notice of a windfall from the federal taxperson via a four-page computer printout. "Based on new information," the explanation concluded, "we have examined your eligibility for a credit and revised your entitlement as per the attached calculation." The notice went on to give the previous balance as $0.00 and the government 'underpayment' as $0.01, making our lucky co-worker richer by the princely sum of one cent. Joan, who was still recovering from the nasty sensation engendered by the arrival of any unexpected communication from Revenue Canada, was shocked to learn that she would not actually receive the amount owing. "We do not charge or refund amounts under $2," the notice stated, adding that any questions she had could be answered by calling the government office responsible. One that immediately springs to mind is why they would waste taxpayers' money sending out this letter in the first place.
