Year of the Tiger

This traditional Lion Dance is one of the many ways in which Chinese New Year will be celebrated locally next week. This is the Year of the Tiger on the Chinese lunar calendar, year 4696.

Chinese community set to celebrate year 4696

The Chinese New Year's celebrations begin tomorrow and continue all week.

This is the Year of the Tiger, year 4696 on the Chinese Lunar calendar.

The Chinese horoscope is broken into a 12-year cycle, each year honouring a different animal. The other animals honoured are the rat, ox, rabbit, dragon, snake, horse, goat, monkey, rooster, dog, and pig.

The Years of the Tiger are 1902, 1914, 1926, 1938, 1950, 1962, 1974, 1986, and 1998.

Those who are born in the Year of the Tiger are said to be poised and impartial, with a strong sense of justice and comradeship.

They love to help the weak

Canada Post has come up with a Year of the Tiger stamp to honour this year's Chinese New Year.

and resist the strong and oppressive. Those born in the Year of the Tiger also have strong leadership qualities.

They are friendly and love easily, though this is not a strong asset in their love lives.

They do not like to obey others and are pioneers rather than followers -- especially when it comes to work.

They are good money-makers, but not good money-savers.

They are considered to be compatible with Horse, Dog and Boar.
