King income topped $150K; Georgina mayor big spender

LISA QUEEN
 Metroland Staff

Former York Region chairperson Eldred King's income topped $150,000 last year - which doesn't include $12,000 for his leased car.

His remuneration included a severance payment of $64,600 he received in December when he retired as the region's top politician after 13 years.

Under the Municipal Act, regions and municipalities had to report politicians' salaries and expenses by Feb. 28.

According to the report presented to regional council last Thursday, King's remuneration and severance package totalled $149,155.

He also received $2,500 in expenses - including $676 for a municipal conference in Toronto and $300 for a meeting of Ontario's regional chairpersons in Ottawa - and a further $650 as a member of the Metro Toronto and Region Conservation Authority.

One-third of political wages are tax free. Regional councillors who served the entire year received $22,584. Those who didn't return after the November municipal elections such as former Newmarket mayor John Cole, Richmond Hill councillor Gail Blackburn and Markham councillor Fred Cox, were paid $20,697.

Newly-elected councillors earned $1,887 during December.

On the expense side, Georgina Mayor Rob Grossi was council's big spender last year, filing $4,554 in additional claims beyond his salary.

About $300 was to attend an economic development conference in Windsor, while the rest was for mileage.

Markham Councillor Gord Landon claimed $2,877 in expenses - $600 of which was to attend a 911 emergency system conference in London. The rest was for mileage.

ELDRÉD KING

King Township Mayor Margaret Black filed for $1,889 in additional expenses, including $700 for a municipal conference in Toronto. She was also paid $998 for sitting on the Toronto conversation authority.

Regional chairperson Bill Fisch claimed $1,344 for mileage. The former Markham councillor earned an extra $3,500 for taking over the chairperson's seat in December.

Other councillors who filed for mileage included: Vaughan Mayor Lorna Jackson, $922.

Vaughan Councillor Michael Di Biase, $1,295. He also earned $2,104 from the Toronto conservation authority.

Vaughan Councillor Joyce Frustaglio, $934. Whitchurch-Stouffville Mayor Wayne Emerson, $451.

Former Markham Councillor Fred Cox, $465.

Former Markham Councillor Carol Bell, $728. She also took home $11,000 in severance.
