Vitality Suites offers you dentistry without the drills

Recent advancements in 50-year-old dental technology have made it possible for today's dentists to treat tooth decay without the need for rotary drills and in many cases, anesthesia (freezing) as well.

Air abrasion is an ultra-conservative approach to the treatment of dental caries (cavities).

Through the use of a pressurized mass of non-toxic, sand-like powder, both decay and certain types of damaged restorations can be quickly and efficiently removed.

With the elimination of heat, vibration and the noise associated with conventional handpieces, patients are usually able to undergo the procedure without requiring anesthesia.

The use of air abrasive technology relies on a more conservative approach to the detection and treatment of tooth decay.

(This technology is not usually recommended for the treatment of larger cavities).

By removing the lesions in their earlier stages, the patient's experience becomes a much more positive one. Minimal tooth structure is removed as a result of fine pressurized particules applied to the tooth.

The procedure of removing the decay usually only lasts a couple of minutes with the tooth being ready for its final restoration immediately afterwards.

When used in the appropriate clinical situations, such as the treatment of small children or adults who may be afraid or unaccustomed to conventional dental procedures, air abrasion serves as a powerful adjunct to traditional rotary tooth-cutting instruments.

The future advancements of this technology and dentistry in general appear to be very promising.

Also, the next time you visit the dentist, it may be possible to whiten your teeth in just one or two appointments.

Thanks to advancements in plasma arc technology, your teeth can be whitened within an hour.

A special light is applied to each individual tooth after the application of a bleaching solution which initiates the whitening process.

Significant whitening is noticeable usually after just one or two appointments.

This process is similar to traditional whitening procedures provided by most dentists whereby the patient wears bleaching trays at home for several hours each night for a period of one or two weeks. Advantages of chairside whitening includes control of the whitening process, patient comfort and rapid results. Bleaching is a viable option worth considering when people are looking for a conservative approach to enhancing their smile and overall self-image.

Dr. Kalvin Faria will help answer any questions you may have regarding any of these procedures. These services and many more are offered under one roof at Vitality Suites.

Complimentary evaluations are available.

The Golf Stop is for anyone who wants to improve their game

There are many golf videos around, but the best video is the video of your own swing.

"Having your swing reviewed frame by frame, is by far the best investment you can make in your game," said Bruce Houghton, owner of The Golf Stop in Markham.

Video taping the swing of a golfer is just one of the many services The Golf Stop offers.

The store also provides a computer-sensored mat where Houghton can determine the client's ball contact.

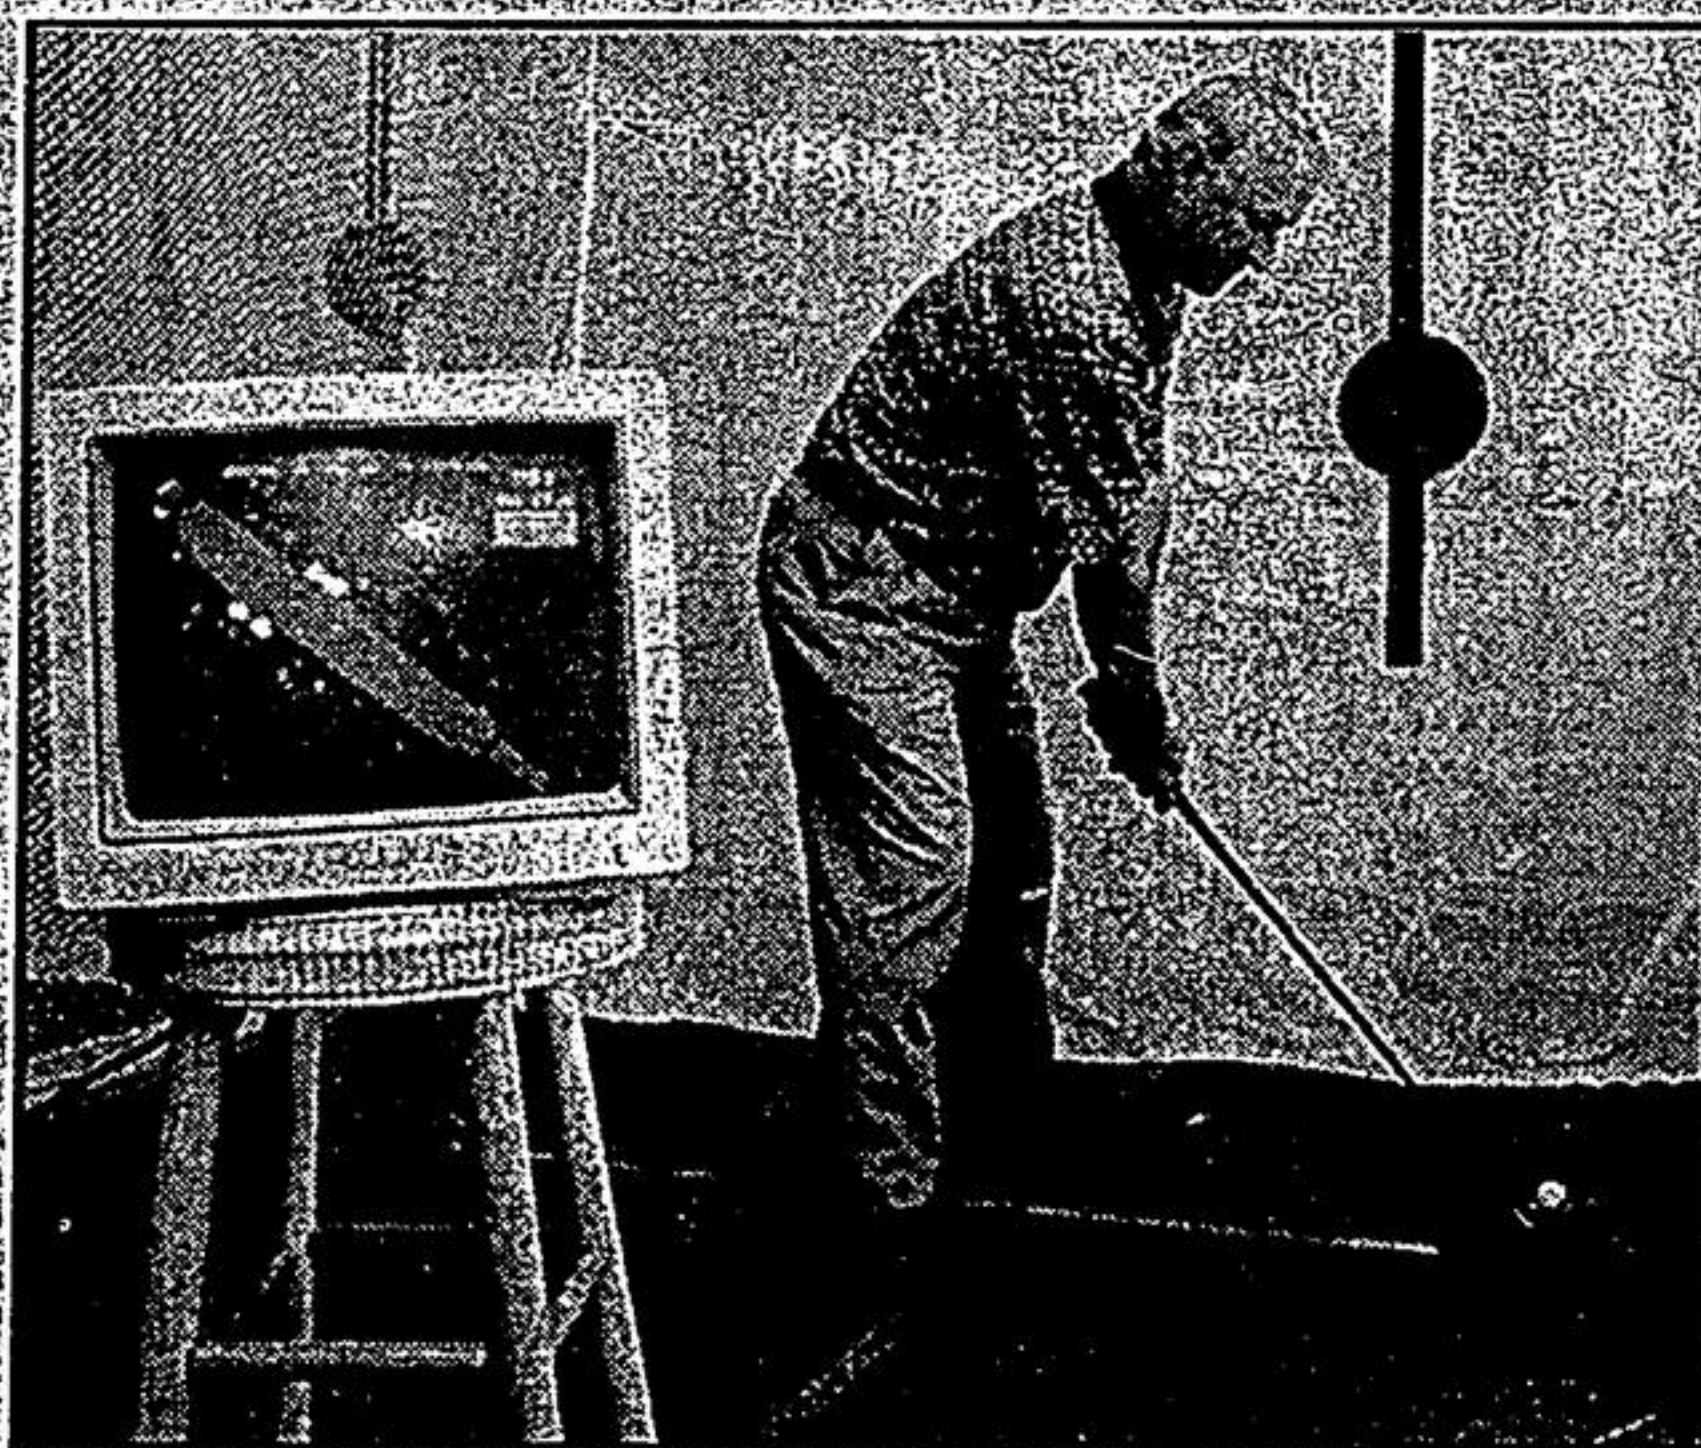

"Most golfers are concerned with their ball striking," said Houghton.

"Our first objective is to determine the client's ball contact by measuring swing path, angle of the club face, club head speed, tempo, club face rotation and impact point.

This is done by having the client hit balls into a net and averaging the measurements displayed on the computer monitor.

The computer is also useful in the club fitting process.

The comparison of clubs with different shafts and weights can be made instantly, making the custom club fitting process simpler, he said.
