Focus On Business

Local artist can help you with all your graphic and printing needs

For 20 years Judy Mayer-Grievé has been designing corporate and small business logos and letterheads, creating unique advertisements for companies, capturing nature in paintings for clothing and designing newsletters and brochures.

And now she wants to help you with all your graphic needs. The former Northern Reflections artist (you'll see her work on clothing for the company) uses the newest technology to help your business succeed in today's competitive market.

Working directly with the client, Mayer-Grievé will ask them a number of questions to get a feel for the business and what type of image they are looking for.

If they need help, Mayer-Grievé will brainstorm ideas with them.

A big part of my job is to present ideas when they are not quite sure.

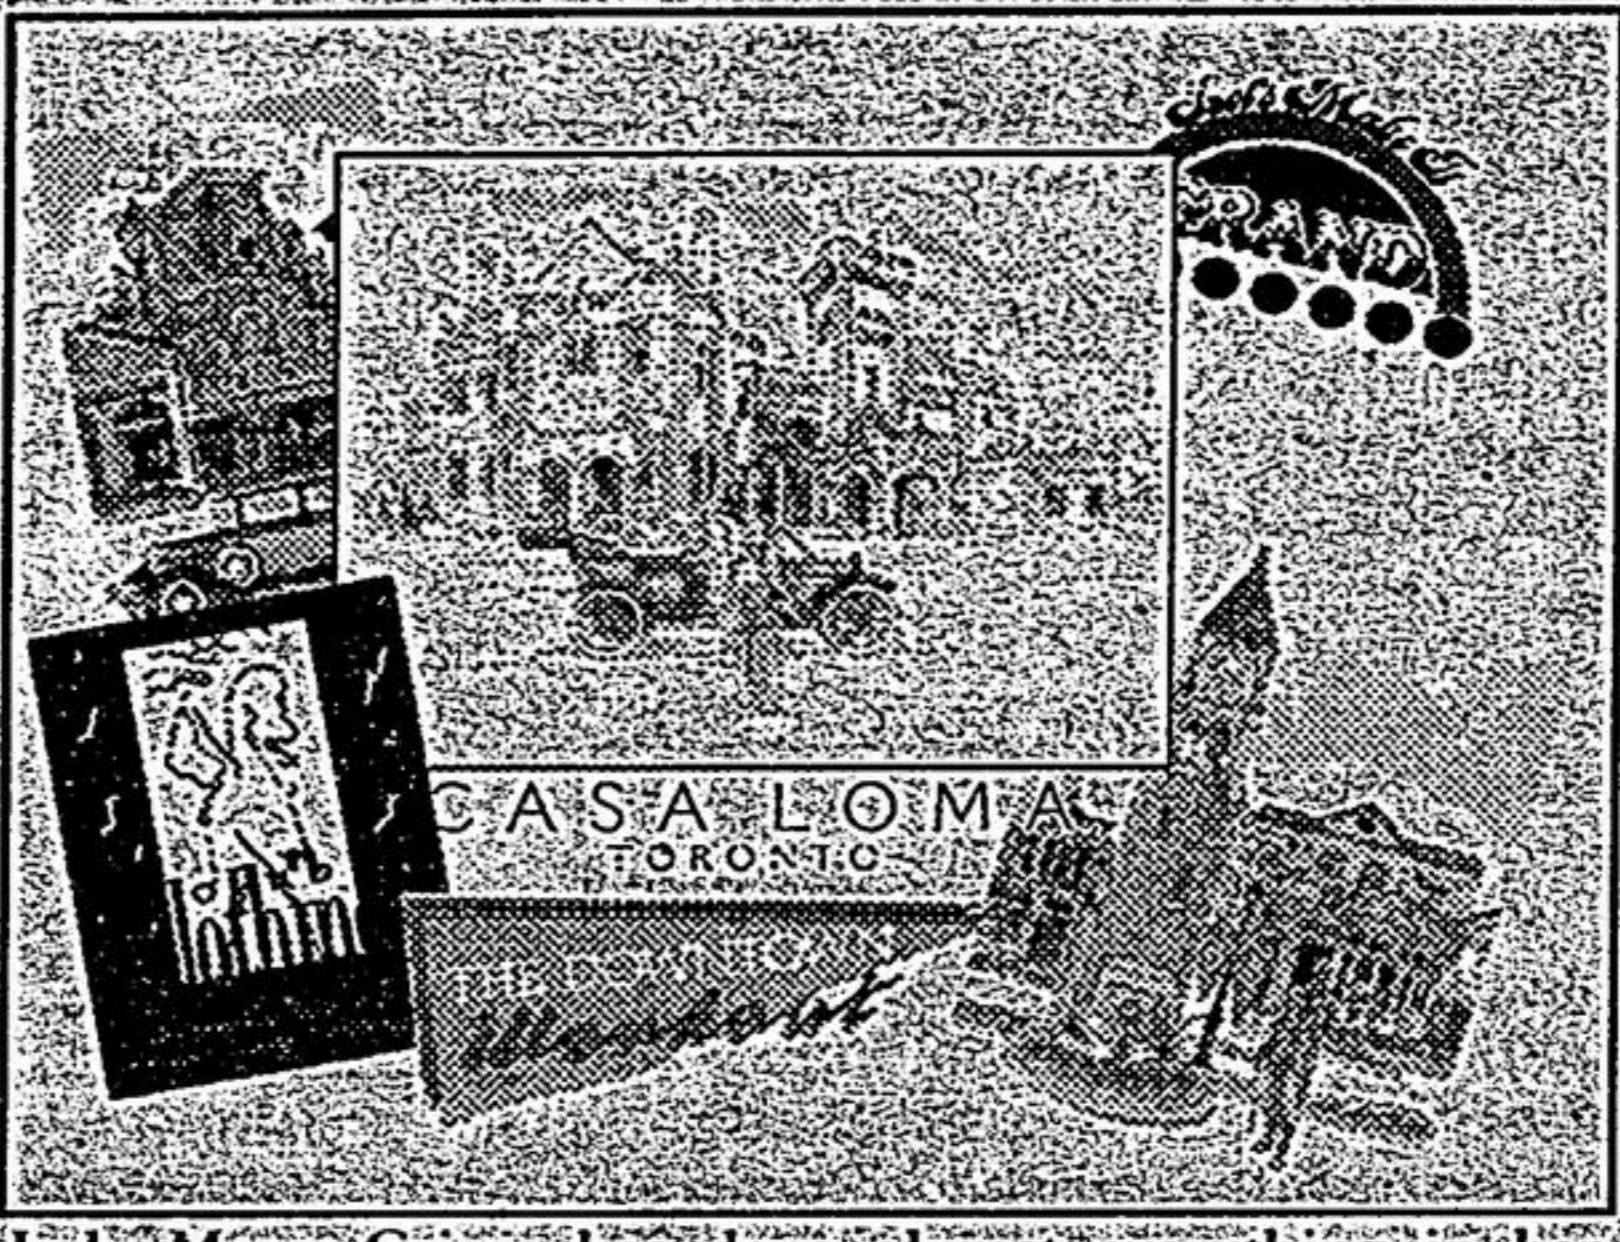

Once a design is agreed upon, Mayer-Grievé will draw the idea out on paper. The client looks over the drawing and then makes any required changes. Then she will scan the picture into the computer and make the changes.

The client has final approval before the design is shipped to the printer.

But that is not all the teacher at the International Academy of Design does.

She is also a partner a new company - a unique company that does silk screen printing.

Silk screen printing - which can only be done on garments - allows the client to choose a broader range of colours that, when finished, are cleaner and more detailed. The high-quality garments (from hats, to bags to t-shirts and sweatshirts) are Canadian-made and come in a variety of colours.

Judy Mayer-Grievé has done almost everything in her career including logos for McDonalds, paintings of cities and t-shirt designs for Northern Reflections.

The company designs clothing for resorts, hotels, theatre groups, special events and more.

It just completed designing and printing clothing for Castle Loma.

Regardless, Mayer-Grievé is a professional who can work to any deadline and can meet any budget.
