Versatility a key to luring spring walleyes

Today marks the opening of another walleye season on the neighbouring Kawartha Lakes chain and most other bodies of water in southern Ontario.

With current weather conditions about two weeks ahead of schedule, the walleye spawning has finished for the most part and fish have vacated those sites.

This is a far cry from the last two springs when cold weather conditions delayed spawning.

Facing a different set of conditions this year, a good bet might be to concentrate your efforts on dropoff areas just off rivermouths or places where there's evidence of new weed growth as the fish should be back on the feed after spawning.

Possessing a good graph recorder can assist you in seeking those locations.

Utilizing light-medium action gear, be versatile in your angling efforts that is try different techniques such as drifting a particular location if windy conditions are prevalent, anchoring just off a weedline or shoal or trolling at a slow clip.

As well, have a good variety of baits to try.

This arsenal should include minnows or worms; a variety of lead head jigs in one-eighth, quarter and three-eighth ounce varieties; floating jig heads, different colours and lengths of plastic grubs; spinner-worm combination rigs and plugs including Rapalas, Shad Raps, Rattlin Raps, Wally Divers or Ripplin Redfins.

In selecting lure colours, try to imitate the most predominant baitfish in that particular body of water.

First- or last-light hours are ideal times to be on the water in pursuit of Mr. Walleye. But being a nocturnal feeder in nature, don't neglect the graveyard shift hours.

Weather conditions can also factor into your success equation. Winds emanating from the west or southwest should entice some good action. But winds from the east could make your outing a challenge.

When you catch one walleye, chances are others are nearby as they tend to move around in schools.

Patience is another vital necessity. Walleyes can be finicky feeders and it pays off to let them take your offering before making a quick hook set.

There are also occasions when these fish will go in a feeding frenzy and like flicking on a switch, they can develop a case of lockjaw.

If fishing the Kawartha Lakes chain, be sure to check the regulations for fast water areas that remain closed for angling for one extra week.

WILD TURKEY HUNT EXTENDED

The Ministry of Natural Resources will offer more opportunities for those in pursuit of wild turkey in Ontario by increasing the bag limit, extending the season and expanding areas for the annual hunt.

Beginning this year there will be a two-bird bag limit for bearded wild turkeys, up from one bird for all Wildlife Management Units that have a wild turkey hunt.

However, hunters will not be able to take two wild turkeys with one licence. They will be required to purchase two licences with seals in order to take the bag limit.

Another change will see the wild turkey hunting season extended until May 31.

If May 31 falls on a Sunday, however, the season will then end on May 30. Therefore, this season, which began on April 27, will run until May 30.

The lone exception to this rule is Wildlife Management Unit 72A in Durham Region where hunting is allowed only until May 15.

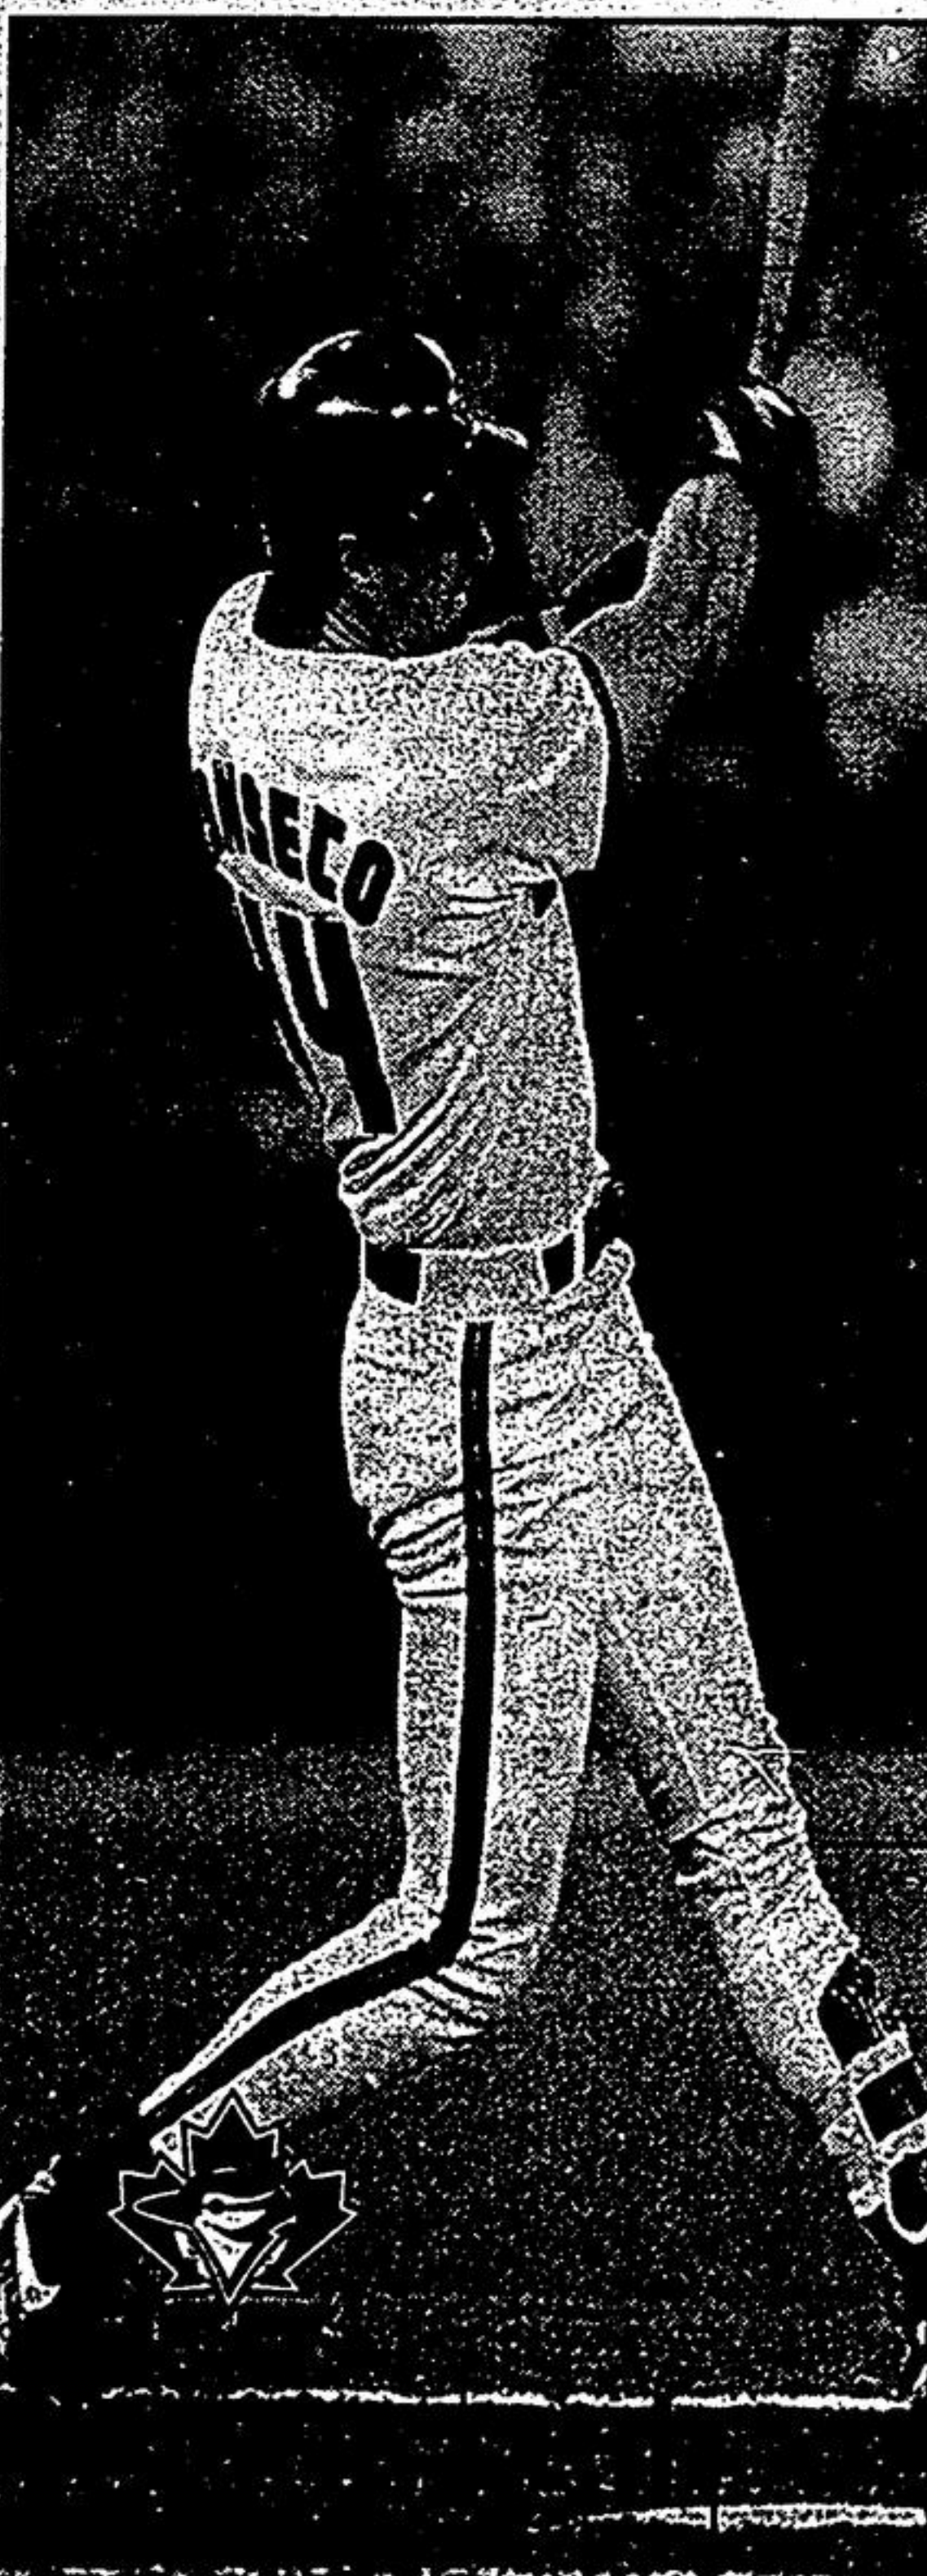

Residents and non-residents of Ontario are eligible to participate in the hunt provided they have attended a mandatory wild turkey education seminar and passed a ministry examination for wild turkey hunting.
