It was a celebration of sport as Stouffville District Secondary School (SDSS) held its annual Athletic Awards Banquet Thursday night.

It was also a family affair as the brother-sister combo of Danielle and Shane Timms were named Outstanding Junior Male and Senior Female Athletes respectively.

Danielle, who was co-winner of the senior girls award along with Alison Crowder, was also named MVP of the senior girls' basketball and girls' slow pitch teams. Shane was midget boys' volleyball MVP. Crowder was senior girls' volleyball MVP.

Amy McElroy was given the honour as Outstanding Junior Female Athlete, and was also co-winner along with Stephanie Rand of the junior girls' badminton MVP nomination.

Ian Hazlewood took home the Outstanding Senior Male Athlete trophy. He was also boys track MVP.

It was the second year in a row that Crowder and Hazlewood found their names on the top senior trophies.

Hazlewood, who was also on the badminton, cross country and senior boys' volleyball teams, was tributed by SDSS coach Jim Fletcher, who called him "a dedicated athlete who constantly strives for excellence." He noted Hazlewood was a "mainstay" of the school's crosses country team the past five years, contributing to three YRAA championships.

Piette acknowledged Crowder's multi-sport proficiency in awarding her the senior girls' trophy. Danielle Timms also drew praise from her coaches.

Shane Timms was called "an all-round athlete who is a natural born leader and competitor," by SDSS coach Christa Bradburn.

Coach Heather Henricks said McElroy worked to excel in basketball, volleyball, badminton, lacrosse and soccer. She also exhibits great team spirit, said Henricks.

"She emits an aura, a spirit a glow. I'd like to be on any team she was on."

Lillian Boyd was also a repeat winner as she was given the Homestead Award for the second straight year. The award goes to the SDSS student who best exemplifies the qualities of student leadership, athletic involvement and organizational support for the school's athletic programs.

"She has a genuine concern for others," said physical education teacher Sue LeRoy. "And she saved all of our hides in the phys ed department at least once this year."

Alex Chacinski, who was the 1996-97 Outstanding Junior Female Athlete, was presented with the Jim Rehill Sportsmanship Award. Chacinski was praised by Henricks as being a tower of strength as an athlete.

"For her nothing ever goes wrong," said Henricks. "Because each bump along the road is just turned into another learning opportunity."

Henricks said Chacinski is a true sportswoman. "She is joyous in victory and gracious in defeat."

Shaun Caramanico and Julie Gribbon were co-winners of the Moral and Physical Improvement
