Now's the best time to get car rust proofed

just before the first snow, fall before treating the car.

By this time, however, the weather is cold and damp as are the inner panels of the car. This situation seriously impedes the effectiveness of an oil spray.

The best time to have an oil spray applied is in spring or summer. The oil will adhere more readily to a dry surface and is thinner in warmer temperatures allowing it to spread more effectively.

Chemical treatments are gaining popularity as they offer the most complete protection.

These thin, oil-like treatments have special additives that allow them to creep into the tightest of spaces for more complete coverage.

Chemical emulsifiers and rust inhibitors are also added. These chemicals will displace moisture that may be trapped within a seamed area and even check the progression of existing rust. No matter how effective any particular product might be, it can only be as effective as the person applying it.

No matter how effective any particular rust proofing product might be, it can only be as effective as the person applying it.

Rust-proofing outfits claiming to offer a complete treatment without drilling any holes should not be considered. It is true that some areas of a vehicle may be treated by removing pieces of trim etc.

However, to thoroughly treat all the critical areas, supplemental holes should be drilled. When selecting a brand of rust-proofing be sure to call ahead and ask questions.

Making an informed decision is the best way to avoid dissatisfaction down the road.
