Proper maintenance, good driving skills will extend life of tires the tire dealer or manufacturer if the vehicle's original tires have been replaced.

A tire is improperly inflated if it is four or more pounds per square inch above or below the recommended level. Tires tend to lose pressure more quickly in colder weather.

Balance and align tires once a year by a professional. Leave this to someone who has been trained to perform this type of service.

Balancing the tire and wheel assembly extends the life and performance of the tires. A vibrating steering wheel, which usually becomes more pronounced at high speeds, is an indication that the tire assembly may be out of balance.

If neglected, incorrect balance or alignment can lead to suspension damage. A car's alignment is altered by potholes and rough roads, which may jolt the settings and cause part of the tire to wear more quickly.

To ensure even treadwear, tires should be rotated every 7,000 to 10,000 miles. Do this about every other oil change. Treadwear is a factor of a vehicle's weight distribution, and it's important to keep the tires rotated for even wear.

Combine these service tips with proper driving techniques.

One often-ignored aspect of tire wear concerns an individual's driving style. Quick starts, hard cornering and quick application of the brakes results in accelerated tire wear.

"Concentrate on being steady and smooth," Brennan said.

"Start gradually, take the corners easily and anticipate interruptions in traffic flow that may require braking. These techniques will help extend the length of your tires."

To avoid being taken for a ride, follow these tips and your tires can take you a long way.
