Spoiled rotten – cats and dogs love staying at Country Estate Kennels

You don't have to feel guilty about sending your pet to a kennel while you're on vacation. In fact, your pet may wish that you go away more often.

Country Estate Kennels, located in Vaudor, opened its doors a year ago to provide a unique service to people and their pets. Situated on 17 acres of land, Country Estate Kennels provides everything an animal needs to make her happy.

Country Estate Kennels will leash walk the dogs along 17 acres of property once a day. Five times a day, the dogs (the large dogs and small dogs are separated) are let loose in a large, fenced-in run.

During the hot spells of summer, the kennel is surprisingly cool and during the cold snaps of winter, the kennel is warm without being stifling.

There is plenty of room for the animals. The kennels, for both the small dogs and cats as well as the large animals, are large enough that the animals can move around comfortably.

The floors are concrete and are sanitized daily. To make it more comfortable for the animals, owners Florence and Peter Kalinovits encourage the animals' owners to bring in their pet's bedding. (As long as it is machine washable.)

There is never a dull moment at the kennel. The couple provides scratching posts and toys for the animals and there is always plenty of fresh water, food and the occasional treat.

And lots of human contact. "It's hard not to get attached to the animals," said Florence.

That's because each animal gets individual attention.

At about 9:30 p.m., each dog (the kennel can only house 25 animals) is leash-walked around the edges of the property.

The dogs also get out of their kennels five times a day. They are either out individually or with other animals. Regardless, they are always supervised.

The kennels boasts a 10-foot by six-foot indoor run, a 60-foot by 90-foot outdoor play compound (that is secure) and a few 10-foot by 20-foot individual runs.

(The small dogs and cats have four-foot by six-foot individual runs.)

There is no extra fees for walking and playtime.

Obedience Training
Country Estate Kennels also provides obedience training.

A professional dog trainer – who has trained European champion show and bird dogs – will train dogs and their owners on weekends and some evenings in the summer.
