

SPORTS: York Equestrian Centre hosts national qualifying competition on Sunday

Dressage team berths up for grabs

It will be shades of the 1988 Olympic Games in Seoul Korea at the York Equestrian Centre tomorrow.

Seven top riders, including two who have connections with the Canadian team which won the bronze medal in dressage in Seoul in '88, will be out to earn a spot on the national dressage team which is to travel to Rome for the World Equestrian Games the first two weeks of October.

The Canadian Equestrian Federation is holding the second of two Selection Trials tomorrow at 12:30 p.m. at the Cedar Valley site, which is located on Davis Drive near McCowan Road. The first trial went Wednesday afternoon.

The seven aspirants to the Canadian team, which will include four horse and rider combinations, include Cindy Ishow. The Hamilton native was a member of the bronze winning Canadian team in '88. She was also fourth in the individual standings in Seoul that year.

Cedar Valley resident Martina Pracht will also be out to win a spot on the Rome-bound Canadian team. Martina is a former general manager of the Eglinton Equestrian Centre, which preceded the York Equestrian Centre at the Davis Drive site. Her mother, Eva Maria, was also with the Canadian dressage team that was bronzed in Korea.

Keswick rider Tom Dvorak is the other York Region rider contesting the Trials. The other four riders are Nancy MacLachlan of Brampton, Victoria Winter of Toronto, Liz Steacie of Brockville and Evi Strasser of Ste. Adele, Que.

A second Trials are to be held in Germany next week as a considerable number of Canadian dressage riders have been training full time in that country since January. Christian Garweg, who trains and coaches dressage at the Davis Drive facility when he's in Canada, is among the riders to be judged in Germany next week.

Admission for tomorrow's trials is $10.
