

HEALTH

Insurance needed while travelling outside Canada

Under the Ontario Health Insurance Plan (OHIP), you are entitled to certain benefits if you are injured, or become ill, while travelling outside Canada.

However, these benefits are limited, and travellers are strongly recommended to get extra health coverage before leaving Canada.

Many health services outside Canada cost considerably more than OHIP covers, and you are liable for the difference. Also, some health services are not covered by OHIP at all, meaning you will have to pay the full cost.

In general, OHIP will pay for eligible emergency health services as follows:

- Up to $200 Cdn. per day for less intensive medical care;
- Up to $50 Cdn. per day for all emergency outpatient services, with the exception of dialysis, which will be paid at a rate of $210 Cdn. per treatment.

For more details on OHIP coverage, contact the Ministry of Health.

Before purchasing health insurance coverage, read the policy and make sure you clearly understand the terms and conditions. Generally, you get what you pay for in health insurance.

• Up to $400 Cdn. per day for emergency inpatient hospital services requiring complex care, such as surgery or coronary, neonatal, pediatric or intensive care.

For more details on OHIP coverage, contact the Ministry of Health.

Before purchasing health insurance coverage, read the policy and make sure you clearly understand the terms and conditions.
