Nuns back for second helping

NOREEN O'LEARY
CORRESPONDENT

The Little Sisters of Hoboken have made their way back to Markham.

Markham Little Theatre is proud to present its second play of the 1998-99 season, Nunsense II, The Second Coming.

In 1996, MLT presented Nunsense, a pun-filled show about the Little Sisters of Hoboken, a group of nuns who were trying to raise money for their convent by putting on silly performances.

The nuns are back, six weeks later, putting on another pun-filled act, this time to thank their previous donors who supported them in their time of need. The sisters once again dance, sing, and rollerskate their way through many zany predicaments that they have created for themselves.

"The show was such a success two years ago and the audience loved it so much, that we're bringing it back for them," said Gloria Thomas, the play's director of choreography.

The play will include its original cast, with Markham residents Carry Harmond as Reverend Mother, Michelle Brown as Sister Hubert, Anne Maria Spear as Sister Robert Anne, Jennifer Covent as Sister Leo, Brooklyn resident Joanna Ellis-Caldwell plays Sister Amnesia.

"We used the same cast and the same five nuns because they are so individual, so different, and have such strong personalities," Thomas said.

The performance involves a lot of audience participation, and comic relief and says viewers will be thoroughly entertained.

"It's a high energy show that involves a lot of musical numbers, dancing, and singing," she said. "It starts with a bang right from the beginning."

The play will run Nov. 11 to 14 at Markham Theatre.

Tickets are $15.50, with good seats remaining for the Wednesday and Thursday performances.

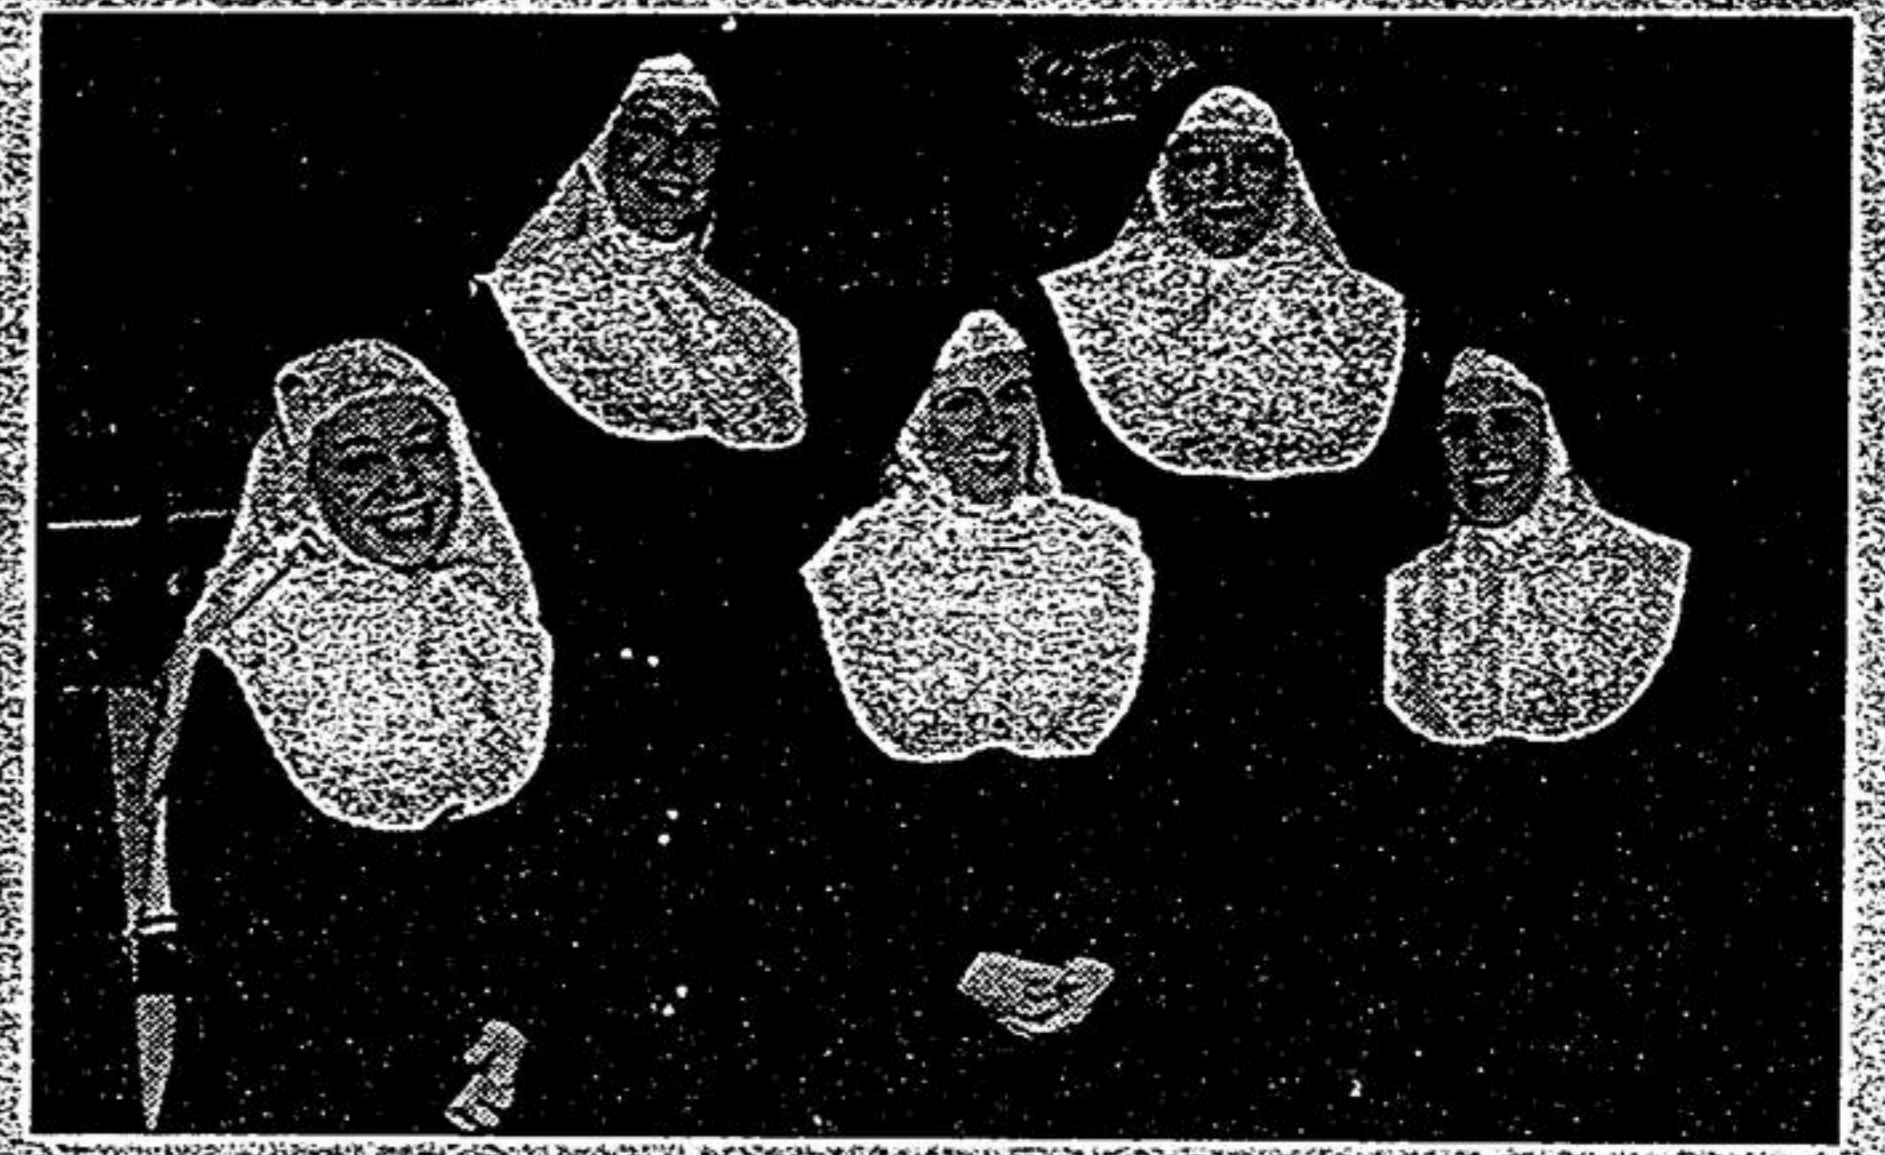

Next up for MLT is its presentation of 1949.

Auditions are set for Nov. 17 and 19 at Cedargrove Community Hall, 7667 14th Ave., east of Reesor Road, at 7:30 p.m.

There are roles for eight males (aged nine through 69) and six females (aged 20 to 65). The characters have Canadian, Newfoundland and English accents.

Callbacks and children's audition will take place Nov. 22 at 1:30 p.m.

For details call Elizabeth Wyatt at 294-3338.

Carry Harmond, Michelle Brown, Anne Maria Spear, Jennifer Covent and Joanna Ellis-Caldwell reprise their roles as the Little Sisters of Hoboken.
