Sheffield students prepare for national championships

FROM PAGE 15

The 14-year-old, who is in Grade 9 at Aurora's Cardinal Carter C.H.S., was in tough against Manitoba's Burun Arevalo, who has his brown belt. Chee-a-tow is a blue belt.

"He beat me at the Ontario Opens at the C.N.E. last summer," Chee-a-tow said. "I beat him to finish first overall in our pool (in the team event in Corner Brook)."

Chee-a-tow admitted to being a little dejected at falling short of the gold.

"I was kind of disappointed at first. But then when I thought of how I had placed second in Canada I was proud. After all, just to make it to the Canada Games is really something."

It marked the second silver medal showing in two years for Chee-a-tow, who placed second in the under-43 kg class at last year's Canadian Juvenile Judo Championships in British Columbia.

Hulshof and Chee-a-tow, who arrived home Saturday, managed to find time between bouts to make new friends among the athletes from across the country.

"I met a lot of kids and we exchanged addresses," Hulshof said. Chee-a-tow spent much of the week accumulating pins from the provinces represented by the various athletes.

"I got all the pins except British Columbia," he said. "I made a lot of new friends."

Hulshof and Chee-a-tow are both members of Stouffville's Sheffield Judo Club.

The club's Seiji Ishiguro also competed at the Games.

Aartje Sheffield, who operates the club with her husband, Steven, was thrilled by the performances of the club members.

"I think we're all pretty excited," she said.

For Hulshof, Chee-a-tow and Ishiguro, the stop is the national judo finals in Rimouski Que. March 20-21.

Hulshof feels her big win in Corner Brook will give her the confidence she needs to do well in Rimouski.

"I think it will spur me on. As for Chee-a-tow, he's convinced he'll be able to handle Arevalo when the two meet again.

"I'm getting the gold in Rimouski. I'll come back and beat this guy."
