Ontario Malls Ensure Charity's In The Bag!

The Salvation Army introduces the most exciting and interactive clothing donation campaign in years

WHO
An international, non-profit organization, The Salvation Army works tirelessly to provide food, shelter, clothing and rehabilitation programs in an atmosphere of dignity and respect.

WHEN
On July 31, The Salvation Army kicks off its 1999 national BLUE-BAG-IT Campaign, the largest clothing recycling program to be launched in Canada, spanning four weeks until August 28.

WHAT
Here's how it works: Beginning July 31, over one million Blue Bags will be delivered directly to the door of households across the City of Toronto. Everyone has clothes in their closets that are no longer worn. Most people recognize the importance of recycling plastic, glass, paper and metals and more people are now understanding the value of recycling used clothing. Rather than stuff your worn clothing in a traditional green garbage bag that heads straight for the landfill, why not BLUE-BAG-IT for the benefit of The Salvation Army and its community programs?

Each Salvation Army Blue Bag will hold approximately 15lbs of clothing that might otherwise find its way into already overloaded landfills. It is the target of the month long campaign to collect a minimum of 100,000 bags in the city of Toronto, equating over 1.5 million pounds of clothing. Nationally, the collection goal is 270,000 bags translating to over four million pounds reclaimed. Once the clothing is received, useable items will be processed through The Salvation Army Thrift Stores where quality clothing is sold at

As pictured, participating mall Marketing Directors gathered at the Maxwell Meighen Centre to serve lunch to over 300 people prior to the kick off of the BLUE-BAG-IT Campaign. affordable prices. All clothing is 100% recycled, a socially and environmentally sound concept.

WHERE
Once you've filled your Blue Bag, what do you do with it? You take it to any one of a number of participating shopping malls located throughout the City of Toronto. Each participating Mall will have a visible and easily accessible drop-off location where you can deposit your Blue Bag. All proceeds generated from the BLUE-BAG-IT Campaign will fund The Salvation Army's many community programs.

WHY
Each of the following statistics represents a Success Story in the making. The Salvation Army meeting needs in people's lives today (figures from 1998): 69,370 people within the Greater Toronto Area received practical help of groceries, warm clothing, and counseling; 932 women from 16-60 years of age were given shelter at the Evangeline Residence; 31,397 beds, and 97,185 meals were provided at the Emergency Shelter; 304,366 meals were served through the Community Feeding Program; 3,425 children attended camp at Jackson's Point Divisional Camp, Camp Wabana and Camp Rainbow; 46,146 individuals, including children, were given assistance at Christmas.

Thanks to the BLUE-BAG-IT Campaign we all have a chance to help The Salvation Army and the people it serves. In August when you clean out your closets to make room for fall, think blue and BLUE-BAG-IT for a worthy cause!
