

Fund-raising taken to new heights

Patricia Williams will be taking a flying leap this Saturday. The Markham resident is planning her first jump from a plane, and she's doing it for a good cause.

The skydiving venture is a fund-raiser for the Unionville Home Society's millennium project, with proceeds going to a new Alzheimer facility.

Williams, along with some friends, will train on Saturday morning and take a dive at about 1 p.m. with Markham Skydiving in Baldwin.

To support Williams with a donation, call Linda Jackson-Wyatt at 477-2839, ext. 245.

Volunteers needed in search for missing woman

Once again, the mother of missing Tammy Lamondin-Gagnon is appealing for volunteers to help search northern Stouffville this weekend.

Lamondin-Gagnon has been missing almost three months. She vanished May 28 after last being seen in the company of Pol Claassen. He hung himself June 7, just prior to his third interview with police.

Jacqueline Gagnon is desperate to find her daughter before winter. Close to 50 volunteers have turned up the last four weekends to lend a hand.

People are asked to call Gagnon if they can help, at (905) 898-4256.

Note the meeting place has been changed for this weekend. Searchers are asked to meet at Goodwood Public School on 3rd Concession, off Hwy. 47, at 9 a.m. for orientation.

Volunteers are reminded to dress properly — long pants and sleeves, sturdy shoes or hiking boots and a hat. Bring water and a walking stick as well.
