

Community mapped out in quilts

Peace by Piece is the theme of a quilt show and sale tomorrow and Saturday at Rouge Valley Mennonite Church. More than 100 quilts will be on display, some dated back as far as 1850.

Quilting has been a rich tradition in York Region for more than two centuries. Quilting bees and sewing circles provided both a social and functional purpose for many families. As a result of these efforts, many families possess quilts that have been handed down through generations.

Many quilts produced in York Region have been donated to relief efforts, both locally and around the world. Many on display have colourful stories and are rich with vibrant memories for their owners.

People attending will have the opportunity to buy a quilt of their own. One quilt for sale is a nine-patch design made of all new material, quilted in comforter design. Another is made of crimplene material and flannelette for extra warmth. Both were donated by Stouffville residents.

Admission is $5 at the door and proceeds from the show will help construct a new building for the Care and Share Shoppe in Stouffville. Rouge Valley Mennonite Church is on Reesor Road, north of Steeles Avenue in Markham.
