VICTIM JONATHAN WAMBACK FACES ACCUSED ATTACKERS

Beating trial in fall

BY JENNIFER BROWN
Staff Writer

The trial for three youths charged in the beating of a Newmarket teenager is to begin in October.

Appearing before Justice Terence O'Hara Tuesday, they were advised the three-week trial would begin Oct. 3.

Two of the three teens, who have all been charged with aggravated assault in the attack on 16-year-old Jonathan Wamback, have been free on bail since the attack June 29, 1999.

However, the third youth has been in custody since his arrest, along with his mother and brothers, following a drug raid by York Regional Police April 6.

The 17-year-old and two 16-year-olds cannot be named under the Young Offenders Act.

During the same court appearance Tuesday, the youth who remains in custody was scheduled to return to court June 6.

The teen was one of five people police arrested at a Newmarket residence, including a 49-year-old woman, her sons, ages 19, 17 and 15, and a 20-year-old boarder.

Police searched the home and seized $5,000 worth of cocaine and marijuana, as well as a sawed-off shotgun and a butterfly knife.

The five individuals face a total of 50 charges, including possession for the purpose of trafficking, possession of prohibited weapons, breach of probation, breach of recognizance and unsafe storage of a firearm.
