

Car runs over ex-husband

A Stouffville woman has been charged after her ex-husband was run over by a car on Sunday.

A Stouffville man told York Regional Police he was in an argument with a woman while she was parked at a Main Street church and the dispute soon escalated. He said the woman stepped on the gas and ran over him. The victim sustained minor injury.

Following an investigation, police charged a 37-year-old woman with dangerous operation of a vehicle, dangerous operation causing bodily harm and failing to remain at the scene of an accident, Sgt. John Sheldon reported.

The incident occurred when the woman was dropping the couple's children off for a pre-arranged visit with their father, Sheldon explained. The victim called police and made his way to Markham Stouffville Hospital where he was treated and released. None of the children was injured, said Sheldon.

The accused is to appear in a Newmarket court July 26.

Lake Wilcox beach reopens after scare

The "unsafe to swim" signs went up at Sunset Beach at Lake Wilcox last week due to higher than normal bacteria levels in the wake of recent heavy rainfall.

Yesterday they came down again.

"It's not something out of the ordinary," said Town of Richmond Hill spokesperson Melanie Baker.

"Every year we experience the rise and fall of waters with resultant higher bacterial levels when they are high because of high rainfall and the resultant runoff from lakes and rivers and storm sewers."

York Region health protection director Oryst Zyhar said his department takes samples at all beaches twice a week.

"A lot of different health departments and works departments just have signs up on the beaches that say water quality may not be good for 24 to 48 hours after a rain event," said
