Stouffville drivers are included in countrywide seat-belt use survey

Stouffville is being included in a Canada-wide survey.

The federal Ministry of Transport is conducting a national seat-belt use survey and is using downtown Stouffville as one of its study areas.

Two surveyors, hired by a Toronto consulting firm, were recently spotted checking vehicles along Main Street. The surveyors did a vehicle count, specifying how many drivers were wearing their seat-belts.

The purpose of the survey is not to determine anything specific, explained Transport Canada research officer Paul Gutskie.

"It's just a survey," said Gutskie. "The federal government's seat-belt use survey is an ongoing thing. It helps safety agencies, including police forces, and it's used by all provinces."
