

Markham's history in music subject of new book

Markham residents are invited to a special book launch on Wednesday, Oct. 18, at the Frederick Horsman Varley Art Gallery on Unionville's Main Street.

If you know of someone who has played a musical instrument or sung in local productions over the past 150 years, chances are they're featured in the book, Musical Memories of Markham.

Markham's first-ever musical history book is the official millennium project of the Markham 2000 Committee and will be available at local bookstores and the Markham Museum.

Information was gathered from a large number of local residents of all ages. More than 130 performers are highlighted in the book, written by Andy Shaw of Markham.

Susan Stiles, the 2000 project co-ordinator, the author and local personalities will attend the official launch, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m.

Messiah singers wanted

Singers in all voice ranges are invited to join Thornhill Presbyterian Church senior choir for a performance of Handel's Messiah in December. Weekly rehearsals start Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. at the church on Centre Street in Thornhill. For more information, call 508-7913 or 881-1344.
