

CHEERLEADING, PERSONAL ATTACKS OUT

Election letters policy strives to be impartial

During the course of any municipal election campaign, The Tribune receives many letters to the editor, discussing candidates and issues.

We have established a policy for publishing election letters.

First, letter-writers should stick to the issues, highlighting matters of importance and making comment on important situations, rather than focusing on candidates.

'Cheerleading' letters, that is, letters praising specific candidates that don't address any issues of importance, will not be published.

Personal attacks, that is, letters attacking specific candidates without addressing any issues of importance, will not be published.

If we believe we are witnessing a letter-writing campaign either in favour of or in opposition to a particular candidate, we will not run the letters.

If you wish to make comment on an issue, please write to us. We believe we should have an open exchange about matters that affect the daily lives of our readers.

And if we choose not to publish your letter and you'd like to talk about that decision, please contact us.

We'd be happy to discuss it with you.

In the end, our formal letters policy still applies — we reserve the right to publish, not publish and edit any submission as a letter to the editor. It is solely at our discretion.
