The parents of the three Troja sisters were both killed when their motorcycle was hit by a car at the corner of Aurora Road and the Ninth Line in May, 1999.

Sisters consider court appeal 'while still trying to heal' of careless driving.

As well, Jackson's father Paul Jackson of Schomberg was charged with letting someone operate an unsafe vehicle. That charge was dropped a year ago.

Today the only option available to the Troja sisters is to appeal the most recent court decision.

The sisters have not, as yet, decided if they'll continue challenging the courts. They'll still dealing with the outcome of Tuesday's court ruling, said Marisa.

"I can't describe the emotion," said Marisa. "We lost both our parents at once. My dad's birthday was Wednesday. I just feel. I felt for him Wednesday."

The young women continue to live together in the family home. Now 24, 25 and 28 years old, life is supposed to be moving along for the Taja sisters.

"I can't describe the emotion. We lost both our parents at once. My dad's birthday was Wednesday. I just feel. I felt for him Wednesday."

But, before progress can take place, healing must occur, Marisa pointed out. Before there's healing, issues linked to the accident have to be settled. "I don't know what I wanted out of Tuesday. It's very difficult to heal when it's left like this. But I don't know what I wanted," said Marisa.

Be a Big Brother

If you like climbing trees, eating pizza or laughing till your head falls off, then I think you'd make a really good big brother.

it's kids stuff.
