From traditional to modern, home furnishings reflect a personal choice

In recent years, there has been a glorious renaissance in home furnishings. From traditional and contemporary to Mennonite and Mission styles, home furnishings have definitely come out of the closet.

Today, more buyers are choosing solid wood because it lasts longer, and because of the innovative designs and colour variations. There is a big difference between solid wood and all wood furniture. Solid wood furniture contains solid wood (cherry, oak, mahogany, etc.) throughout the entire piece. All wood furniture, on the other hand, may contain the veneer of solid wood, but other elements of the piece may be made from particle board, sawdust and glue, or some other wood substitute.

All wood bedroom suites, dressers, beds and armoires, like solid wood, may be well constructed, but consumers should be aware of the difference. What sometimes looks like wood, isn't. People don't mind paying for quality bedroom furniture if they know that it will last two or three generations, or longer.

When it comes to bedding, a wide range of mattress styles are available. The three main styles of mattress construction are foam, pocket coil and continuous coil. People want a quality mattress for a better night's sleep, says Ville Papas, owner of Stouffville Fine Furniture. The pocket coil will provide a more luxurious sleep, and the continuous coil mattress will provide therapeutic relief for all sorts of back pains.

If you're unsure about what type of furniture to purchase, don't despair. Stouffville Fine Furniture offers an in-home consultation service. This service is to help customers to coordinate various design elements and colours in their home, says Papas. Having an in-home consultation service can save you time and money when buying furniture.

Ms. Papas deals directly with major furniture and bedding manufacturers and enjoys volume discounts that are passed on to her customers.

Stouffville Fine Furniture carries top name brands including Broyhill, Superstyle, Decor-rest, Villageois, Simmons and King Koil. All items are beautifully displayed in the store's large, spacious showroom.
