death or serious injury involving police.

Martin and Hoskin claim the charges were laid to avoid "political criticism" and the decision was influenced by media coverage of the high-profile case.

On the night of the shooting, Hoskin, Martin and Robins went to Romagnuolo's house to arrest his son, Lorenzo, in connection with an alleged threat. The visit turned deadly when Lorenzo refused to go with the officers. Tony was shot dead by Martin and another son, Rocco, was wounded in the resulting melee.

Earlier this year, a judge threw out a $30-million lawsuit against the SIU which was filed by York Region Police Det. Robert Wiche. He was cleared of manslaughter in connection with the June 19, 1996, fatal shooting of Faraz Suleman.
