

NO SMALL CHANGE FOR NEW YORK

Teens charged with trespassing at hockey rink

York Regional Police caught seven teenagers smoking what is believed to be hash next to the Stouffville Arena during a junior A hockey game Thursday night.

Police Sergeant Tony Brown said the young offenders, all 16-year-old males from Stouffville, were driven home by police or picked up by their parents. Police were called to investigate possible illegal activity in a storage building at the back of the town-owned arena on the Ninth Line.

The amount of substance seized was so small, the police charged each young offender with a trespassing offense, said Sgt. Brown.

"They were trespassing on arena property and that's all they were charged with. They will not appear in court," Sgt. Brown said. "They were taken home to their parents and issued with a trespassing summons once they got there."
