PILLARS OF THEIR SCHOOLS

LEFT: The joint was jumpin' at Summitview Public School in Stouffville as Kyle Vesh and Lauren Barber danced in the school's Talent Showcase Wednesday.

RIGHT: Grade 12 design students at Milliken Mills High School decorated pillars in the school with murals as part of the York Region District School Board's character education initiative. Showing off the Respect pillar are Gee Sing Mark, 17, and Rayhan Tarmohamed, 17 (top).

No savings in owning
 Richmond Hill Hydro

Meanwhile, in the midst of these discussions, Richmond Hill decided to sell its $140 million utility. It was to be folded into the new Amalco, or some called it Unipower, to create the third largest utility in Ontario.

But because Amalco was not yet a legal entity, Vaughan and Markham applied to jointly purchase Richmond Hill, with the plan to split its assets among the partners. They received approval late last year to make the buy.

Now, with the fall of Amalco, Markham and Vaughan are stuck running Richmond Hill hydro as well as their own utilities with little savings in sight.

CORRECTIONS

Dental hygienist Yolanda Massop was incorrectly named in Thursday's story on local dentists bringing smiles to Nicaraguans.

Incorrect information was given in Thursday's Joan Ransberry column about upcoming Acoustic Jam dates at the Earl of Whitchurch in Stouffville. The musicians perform every three weeks, and the next jam session is Sunday from 2:30 to 6:30 p.m.

The Economist & Sun/Tribune regrets the errors.
