Architect has plans for town hall

Bell and Domenic Ditata.

"We want to purchase the old town hall. This is an important building to us and to the town," said Mr. Arrowsmith. "It could serve as the catalyst to start to bring much capital into the downtown core."

"Our plan is to fully restore the building. I've done a lot of heritage work. It has involved a great deal of restoration. I want to occupy this building. I have a vested interest in this town."

Mr. Arrowsmith was 14 years old when his family moved to Stouffville. Before forming his company in Stouffville in 1989, he was a department head for the Town of Whitchurch-Stouffville for 13 years, beginning in 1976.

Mr. Arrowsmith estimates the restoration of the century-old building would cost around $700,000. "We will fully restore it," Mr. Arrowsmith declined to say how much he's prepared to pay for the building.

The old town hall went on the auction block in April when the Clock Tower Theatre Association's plan to convert the 6,800-square-foot building into a multi-purpose cultural facility was aborted. At that time, Whitchurch-Stouffville council put the wheels in motion to either sell or lease the landmark.

Councillor Sherban wants the municipal office to pull up stakes from its Sandiford Drive location and return to its former home in the old town hall. Her proposal has attracted the support of the Business Improvement Area and a group of local artists. Meanwhile, officials of the Whitchurch-Stouffville Chamber of Commerce have suggested Councillor Sherban's proposal deserves council's attention.

Councillor Sherban also submitted an architectural rendering of the building along with her proposal.

Further details of the proposals will be made public at a Whitchurch-Stouffville council meeting on June 28. "Council will review each of the proposals in full," said Mr. Kristoffy.

However, a final decision won't be made until after all details are studied. The process will include a public meeting. "The final decision will be made by council," the CAO stressed.
