racism," said Selina Smyth, 20, from Antrim, Northern Ireland.

On her first trip to North America, Ms Smyth said the atmosphere at Exhibition Place was like nowhere else she's been, with everyone "living for the same memory."

Like others of her delegation, she came to church yesterday in a T-shirt of emerald green. Many of the pilgrims carried flags of their homelands and wore World Youth Day bandanas and Canadian souvenirs.

A special moment arrived when pilgrims from all corners of the world said the prayer, Our Father, in their own languages this week, recalled Emily Scow of Roscommon, Mich. "Even though we're very different we all believe the same things."

Her friend Kyle Kroi wants to return from the festivities living the way Jesus lived. "It's more than being a good person. It's forgiving people and showing people the way to God."

St. Mark Catholic Church held a special mass this morning for all pilgrims in Whitchurch-Stouffville — 50 from the town and 50 from Maine.

St. Patrick's parishioners received 179 pilgrims this week but had room to host about 310, host family coordinator Jim Mitchell said this week. "The worst part of all this was calling about 40 families to say, Sorry, we don't have pilgrims for you."
