

PM keeps sane as war talk grows

U.S. President George Bush's most comfortable position seems to be looking down the barrel of a gun.

While many American presidents are in their glory when suiting up for military action, war makes most Canadian prime ministers nervous. Mention the word war around Jean Chretien and he breaks out in a rash.

The poor man gets all fidgety. His mouth get dry, he licks his lips, blinks a lot, pulls on his collar and his rickety command of the English language nearly flies out the window.

While our prime minister is no darn good when it comes to throwing Canada into a catastrophic war, he's a champion of the back alley. Jean Chretien is a one-on-one, anything goes street fighter.

He believes in the philosophy of a black eye, a bloody nose and trip someone when he isn't looking.

The law of Mr. Chretien's jungle lets you fool the other guy into thinking you have a rock in your pocket. In other words, when your fists fail, try your brain.

If you figure you can run faster, use your feet and get to heck out of there. Come to think of it, Mr. Chretien's used the same approach when running the country.

That may be why we voted for him. Canadians are not fools. We look out for ourselves.

So here we are today. The U.S. is loading up the guns and targeting Iraq. Meanwhile, we have Jean Chretien: A leader who's not anxious to throw us into the U.S.-made soup.

Americans are champing at the bit. Since Canada isn't, we're giving North America needed balance.

When the Prime Minister is put into a corner and drilled about war, he uses a bag of made-in-Canada tricks.

Here's a typical media Q & A with our guy Jean:

Reporter: Mr. Prime Minister, how do you feel about Canada joining the U.S. in attacking Iraq? And what is Canada's position on the escalating U.S. military threats against Afghanistan?

Prime Minister: How do I

feel? I feel a cold coming on. I said to Aline last night, "Make me a hot toddy. It'll attack the nasty cold germs." Your next question was about the afghan. Aline's mother gave us one for a wedding gift. We've been married 46 years and we've only had one fight: Aline won it. Back to the afghan and my cold. Aline made a mustard plaster, slapped it on my chest and wrapped me in mother's Afghan. She let me cook for an hour. Boy, I came out of it fit as a fiddle. I felt so good, I darn near gave Saskatchewan $4 million to get rid of its grassy hoppers. But, I thought better of it. I'll give the money to let Paul Martin and let him use it to ruin Canada in 2004.

Jean Chretien is a one-on-one, anything-goes street fighter.

Reporter: But Mr. Prime Minister, what about Iraq?

Prime Minister: A rack. A rack of what? If you are recommending a rack of lamb, I don't think Aline would go along with that. But the mint jelly might be nice. It'll clear up the sinuses. If I could breathe through this old honker, I might be inclined to give Quebec a smack on the side of its head just for old times sake.

Reporter: Mr. Prime Minister, it seems likely the United States is going to war with Iraq regardless of international opinion. Where does Canada stand?

Prime Minister: Canada stands on top of the United States. Unless, of course, the U.S. leaves and goes on vacation. If that happens, I guess Canada will drop down and stand on top of Mexico. It doesn't really matter as long as my Canada has some country to stand on. That's all the questions today folks.

I feel a relapsar sneaking up on me. I gotta get to Aline for some more protection.
