league and rep league.

Mr. Foti said indoor soccer started to become popular about 20 years ago and, over the past 15 years, municipalities have been building more facilities for indoor soccer.

"Most kids play (indoor soccer) in the GTA."

There are even professional leagues that play indoors, he said.

Indoor soccer takes place on a smaller field, with six or seven players to a side as opposed to 11 players on each side in outdoor soccer.

Players make changes on the fly in indoor soccer and, in some cases, the ball can be bounced off the wall.

"For us, it is essential to allow the kids to keep playing the game or, in some cases, it's an introduction to soccer," he said. "The game is faster. Kids have to learn how to react faster."

"Almost every municipality has a gym close enough to them to take advantage of," he said.
