

Holiday Gift Guide 2002

A spa day is a gift that does a body good!

It's no secret that taking time out of our busy schedules to take care of our bodies is sometimes easier said than done. Either we don't have the time, or have a reason why we don't make the time. There always seems to be something much more pressing to do. Does this sound like someone you know? If so, here's a tip on the perfect gift for that person.

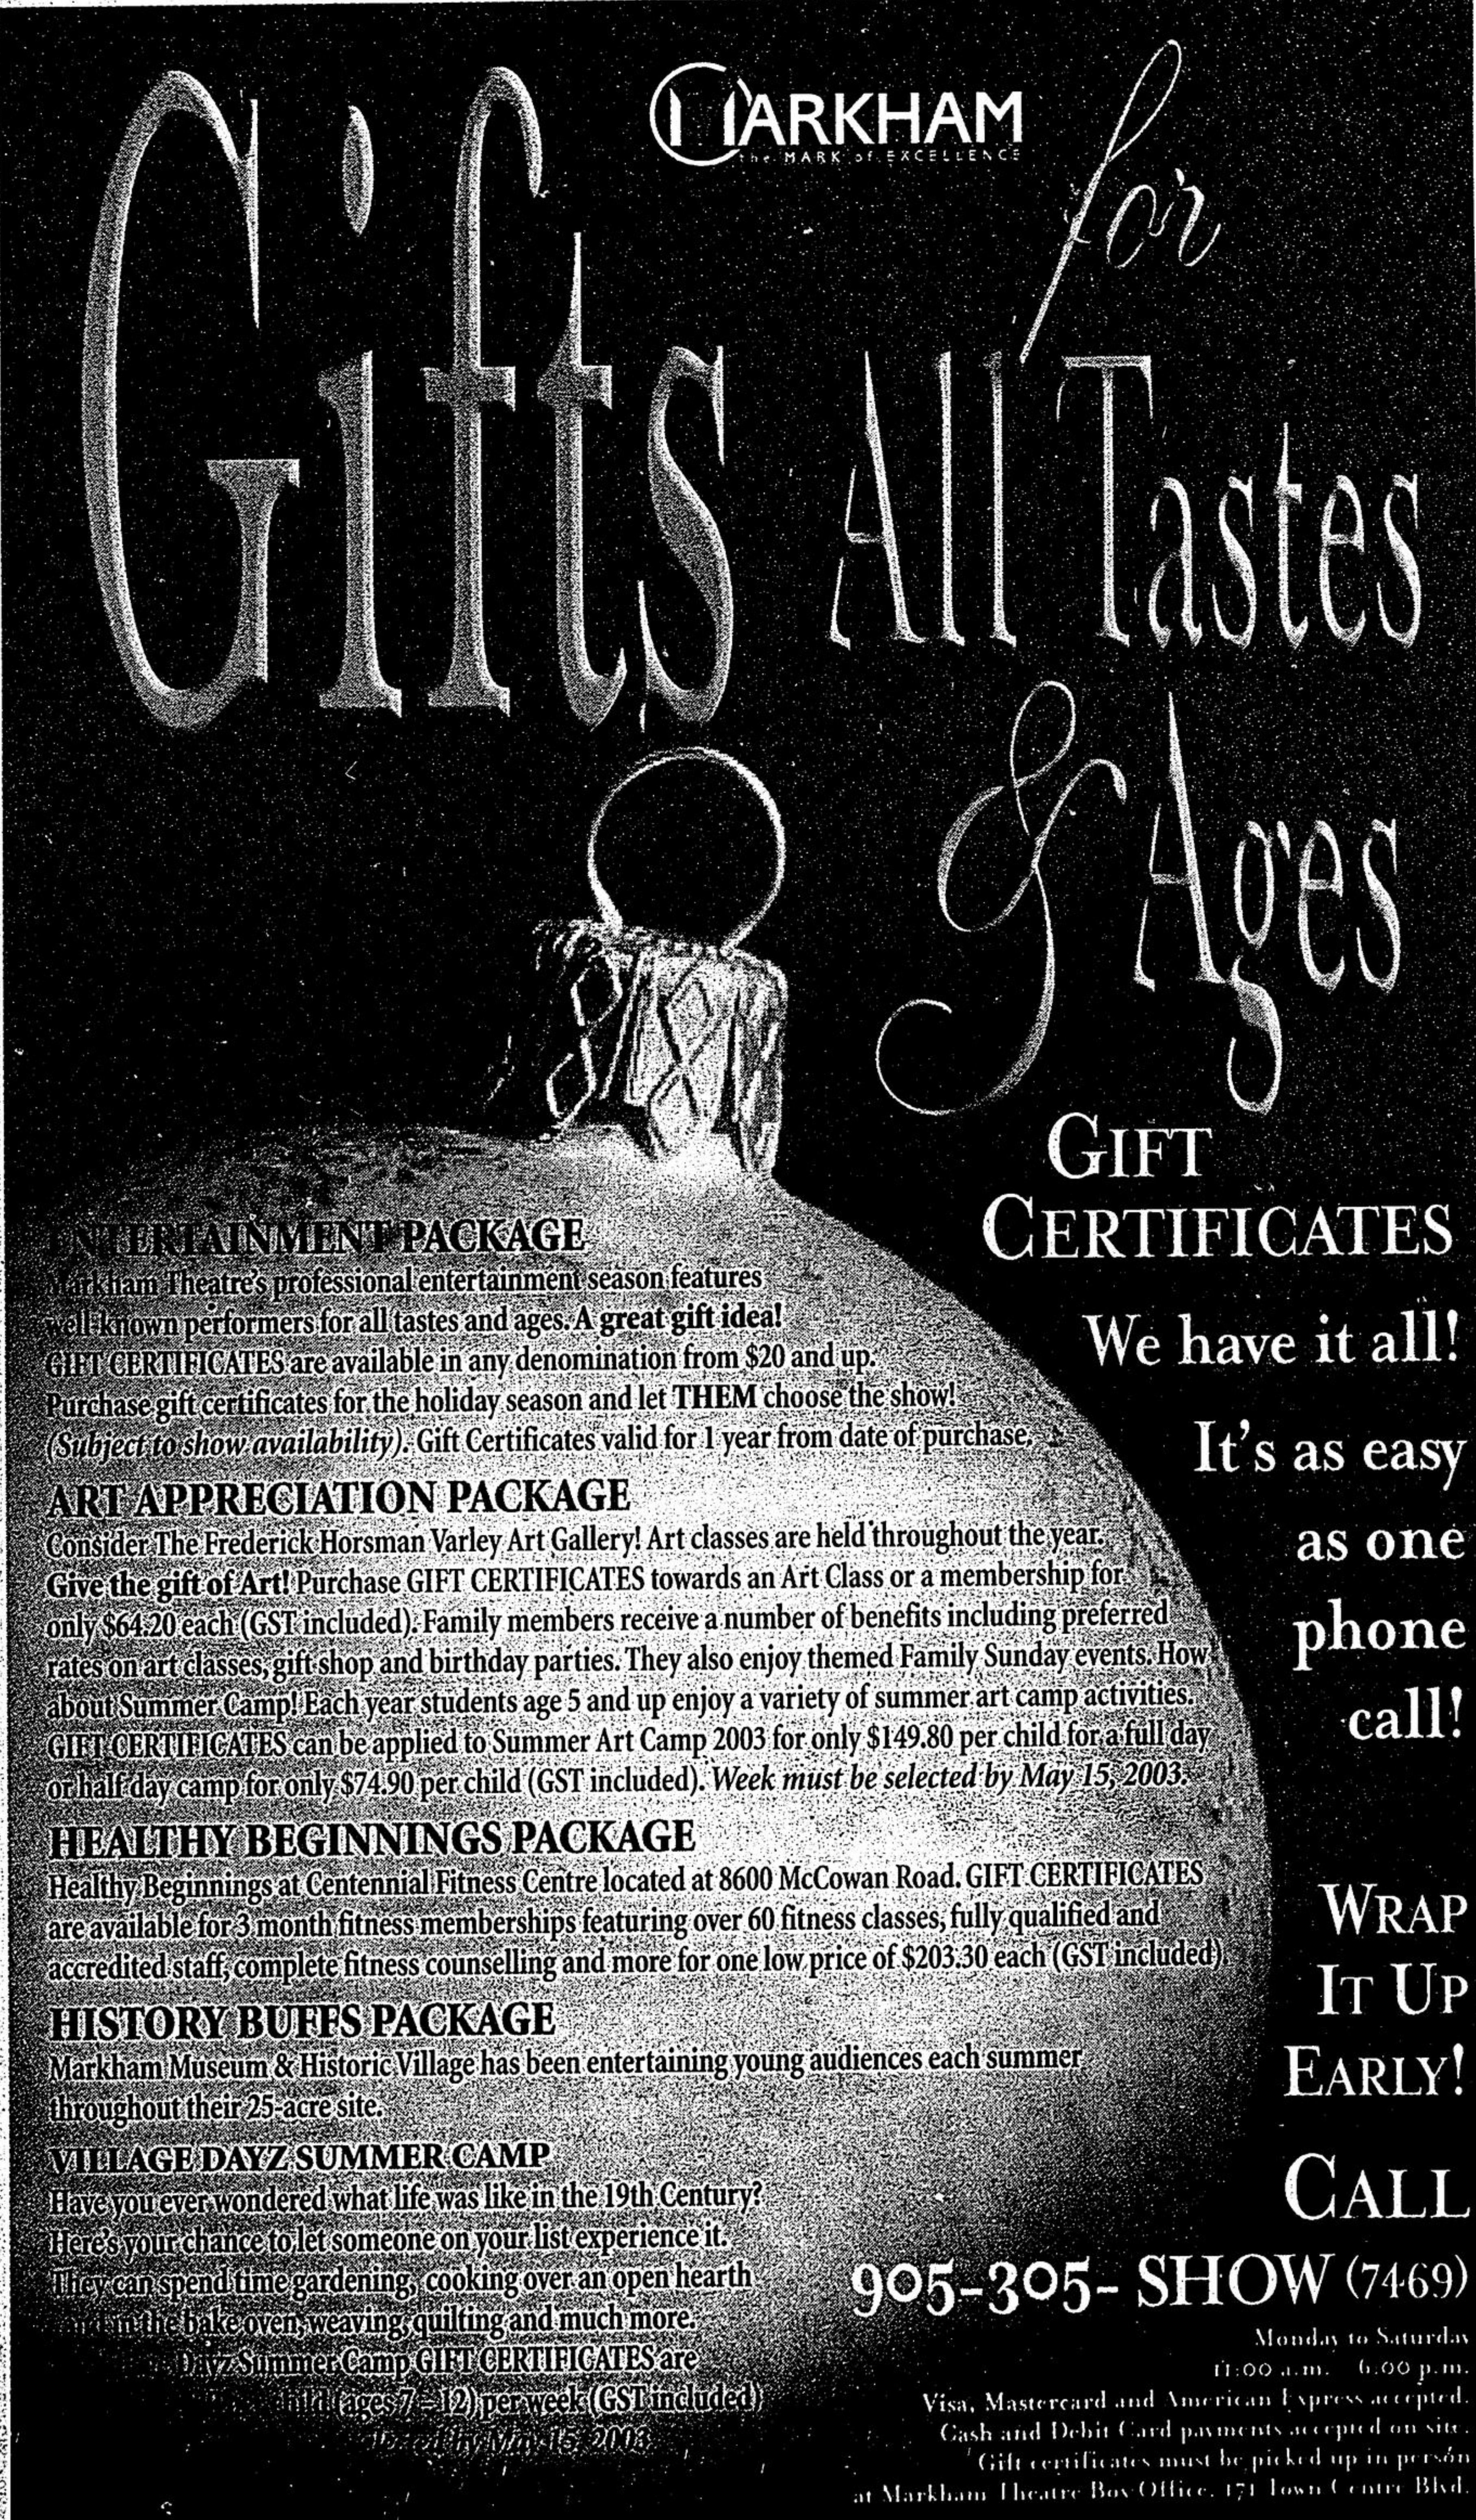

When considering a gift for people who are always running themselves ragged, try to think in terms of pleasure, relaxing, getting away from it all and recharging one's batteries. Now, think about a massage session, skin care, facials, mud and algae baths, reflexology, colonic irrigation or even thalassotherapy. In fact, when it comes to these types of gift ideas for the body and soul, the possibilities are virtually endless.

Massage therapists, estheticians, health specialists and alternative-medicine professionals are excellent resources when it comes to deciding on the best form of treatment. To make the right decision, consult the specialists in your area. Many offer gift certificates or special package deals for Christmas. When it comes to pampering the body and soothing the soul, it's all there for friends and family... and even yourself!

No matter what spa package you choose, your gift will provide a passport to a dream world of luxurious pampering and well-deserved relaxation. If you aren't sure what spa services your friend or loved one would prefer, ask for a gift certificate instead, and let them choose for themselves.
