

Markham, Stouffville women honoured for volunteer work

Three Markham and Stouffville women will revel in limelight at the In Celebration of Women's awards for York Region. They were nominated by friends, co-workers and family members who recognized their commitment to the community and their careers. "Lolita Bruneau, Chips Klein and Gladys Clarkson don't just do their jobs," said awards co-director Diane Humeniuk. "They go far beyond what the average person does for their community every day."

Ms Bruneau, a Markham resident, is receiving the direct teaching award because of her commitment to the York Catholic District School Board and her extensive repertoire of community service. Markham's Chips Klein has been nominated because of her volunteer work and dedication to her chosen profession. She's receiving the small business entrepreneurial award. Ms Klein founded the technology transfer and business management company, Chips Co.

Canada, in 1982. It helps suppliers and buyers communicate more efficiently, plus the company also supports the Women Inventors Project. Stouffville winner Gladys Clarkson is the recipient of the event's seniors award. The former Whitchurch-Stouffville citizen of the year is best known for her work with the Royal Canadian Legion and the Boy Scouts. The awards banquet is May 3 at Dinardo's Banquet Centre in Aurora. —Alyssa Julie
