abducted. Instantly, she was returned to a grief-stricken time. A wave of sympathy and compassion filled her heart for Holly's family and friends, she said.

"You're just numb," Mrs. Jessop said, her chin resting in the palm of her hand.

Upon hearing the news, her thoughts immediately turned to the Jones family.

"I could feel their every movement, their anger, disbelief, confusion. It brings the memories right back."

Holly, a 10-year-old girl living in west-end Toronto was reported missing Monday after insisting she walk home alone from a friend's house at 6:30 p.m.

Less than 24 hours later, Toronto police reported body parts, found in bags in Lake Ontario, were those of Holly.

Mrs. Jessop said her hopes of finding Christine alive faded with each passing day. It must have been particularly shocking for the Jones family to hear of their daughter's death just a short time after her disappearance, Mrs. Jessop added.

"You still think she's going to just walk up the driveway and say, 'Hi Mom, what's the matter?'"

Even if there's an end to it, it still hurts.

She said the most difficult part for the Jones family may be overcoming the sense of guilt for Holly's murder.

"We can protect our children to a degree, but we have to let our children live," she said.

"Even if there's an end to it, it still hurts. You will always live with a certain amount of guilt. Maybe I should have done this, or done that. But nobody has the right to touch our children."

Mrs. Jessop said she thinks of Christine every day.

Her only hope now is Holly's killer is found quickly, for the family's sake.
