

Town needs more industry, Sherban says

acter of the town," she said. "People who moved here did so for the town's friendly character, small town flavour, heritage core and country setting and they want to keep the same feeling."

In her view, keeping Stouffville's small town flavour involves preserving its downtown core, even though it can't be recreated as it was years ago, she admitted. Better use has to be made of the old town hall, the Silver Jubilee Club building and the former library, which is now home to the Latcham Gallery and the Care & Share Thrift Shop.

USE BUILDINGS BETTER

"These buildings need to be used to their greatest extent for the community's use," she said. Artists, seniors, theatre advocates and others will be consulted during the decision-making process, she said.

Another priority is broadening the town's tax base by attracting new businesses and industry to the community.

Although the Whitchurch-Stouffville business community generates 11 per cent of the town's tax revenues, Mrs. Sherban wants to formulate a corporate business plan to increase that figure to 15 to 17 per cent, a figure more consistent with neighbouring municipalities.

To involve young people more, Mrs. Sherban would like to see a youth council that would work with the town.

"The community doesn't think we are working with the youth right now," she said.

'NOT URBAN MAYOR'

Holding her campaign kick-off at a country winery was intentional. "I won't just be an urban mayor," she said. Rural doors will be the first to be knocked on during Mrs. Sherban's mayoral campaign.

Born and raised in rural Whitchurch-Stouffville, the 47-year-old councillor attended Stouffville District Secondary School. She now lives in Stouffville with husband, Peter, and their three daughters, 20-year-old Lindsay, Lisa, 17, and Lesley, 16.

She was a strong proponent of the indoor pool and founded the culture, arts & heritage for Whitchurch-Stouffville committee more than a year ago.

SUE SHERBAN: Would establish Whitchurch-Stouffville youth council if elected mayor Nov. 10.
