

Elf good holiday flick to leave you warm, happy

Will Farrell brings some great holiday spirit to Elf.

In this perfect family flick, Will plays Buddy, a human who was raised by Santa's elves to think he's an elf.

Soon after discovering the truth, Buddy travels to New York City in search of his human father, a book publisher who apparently is on Santa's 'naughty' list.

After arriving in New York, Buddy quickly finds his father and ends up going home to meet his 'new' family.

Buddy's unusual upbringing as an elf is hilarious, especially when he's eating — he has some very strange 'elf' eating habits.

His new brother, Michael, doesn't seem to like Buddy as much as expected, but when Buddy saves him from a snowball attack, he takes more of a liking to him.

Soon it's Christmas Eve and Santa arrives in New York, but things seem to get a little tense and it's up to Buddy, Michael and a few other friends to save Christmas by demonstrating some true holiday spirit.

Elf leaves you feeling warm and happy, just like a good holi-

Kids in America by The American Juniors

TV turns to tunes with The American Juniors Kids in America CD.

These mini-idols have turned solo for this collection of classic remakes and new releases.

The CD features all 10 of the finalists singing the original One

Step Closer, the theme song of the American Juniors, as well as the title track Kids in America.

Songs, which were originally performed by classic artists such as Burt Bacharach and Tina Turner, are re-done by the young, new voices of the American Juniors, including TV show favourites Katelyn Tarver and Taylor Thompson.

The oldies on the CD will appeal to parents, while children will enjoy hearing these songs performed by kids just like them.

The CD features all of the top finalists from the show performing their own song selections.

My personal favourites include I'll Never Fall In Love Again (by Katelyn Tarver, originally performed by Burt Bacharach) and Let 'Er Rip! (by Tori Thompson, originally performed by The Dixie Chicks).

If your kids were fans of the TV show, then they will find this CD number 1.

Today's seniors don't think in terms of age

From page 19.

With about 1,000 members, the Older Adults in Action Centre has much to offer area seniors, stresses president Barbara Brown. Open Monday to Saturday, including three nights a week, the 14,000-square-foot centre is a place to visit and enjoy.

"There's no need to be lonely. We are here," Mrs. Brown said. "Ours is a very social club."

Since Mrs. Clarridge has no plans to slow down, the centre will always be part of her social life. "It's the place where you say, 'Hi, I haven't seen you since yesterday. I've got so much to tell you," Mrs. Clarridge said.

The McConaghy Seniors Centre in Richmond Hill, with a membership of 1,000, "keeps up with the times", executive member Sonia Cantrill said.

"Today's seniors don't think in terms of age," Mrs. Cantrill said. "We think in terms of health. We are, in fact, healthier now than we've ever been."

Marion MacDonald is an example of a today's senior. She's busy, happy and alive.

Never mind Mrs.

MacDonald's age. This woman has never let the grass grow under her feet.

"Years ago, grandmother sat in a rocking chair. Not anymore. I don't have such a chair," Mrs. MacDonald said.

She could be spotted in this weekend's Santa Claus parade in Richmond Hill. "I'm on the (McConaghy) seniors float. It's a horse-drawn," Mrs. MacDonald said. "We've been busy putting the float together this week. It's been fun."
