

Young Stouffville artists get Main Street showcase this week

The window of Birkett-Hassard Insurance Brokers Ltd. on Main Street in Stouffville is filled with colourful art.

Paintings, prints and sculptures by three teenage artists of the Latham Gallery's After School Art Club are being shown until Dec. 10. The 12- to 14-year-old students have been working in a variety of media with art instructor Noeline Byrne for the past eight weeks.

"We invite everyone to drop by at some point to enjoy these projects and support the students," Latham Gallery curator Maura Broadhurst said.

Another session of the eight-week after school art classes begins in January. The young artists meet every Wednesday from 4 to 6 p.m. The cost of the program is $120.

The program is a first for the gallery, which is trying to encouraging older children to try their hand at art. There are already several programs in place for younger children.

Hats support spinal cord research

Boyd's Source for Sports in Stouffville hopes to turn hats autographed by NHL players into an eventual cure for spinal cord injuries.

Each hat has been autographed by one of 55 NHL players, and each player has signed only 50 hats.

Boyd's store is one of more than 100 across Canada who are taking part in the fundraiser for Shoot for a Cure, which was launched Friday.

The program teams the Source for Sports stores with Shoot for a Cure, a hockey-focused campaign of the American and Canadian Spinal Research organizations. Shoot for a Cure aims to increase awareness of spinal cord injury and promote prevention, research and a cure.

Stouffville native Brad May, who plays for the Vancouver Canucks, is the chairperson of the advisory committee of Shoot for a Cure. The group, which was started Dec. 12, 2000, wants to raise $1 million for the cause. Its total to date is $505,000.

Ian Boyd, owner of Boyd's Source for Sports, is challenging the community to match his $25 donation for each hat purchased. Coaches have been coming into the store to buy the hats for raffles to raise funds to support their teams while raising money for Shoot for a Cure.

All proceeds go directly to Shoot for a Cure.

BRAD MAY: NHLer and Stouffville native chairs advisory committee for spinal research organization.
