

Lawn bowling, curling clubs could be in seniors facility

Stouffville Hydro with the other $750,000 to be raised through donations and grants.

At this time, "no decision to actually put anybody in there," has been made, Mrs. Sherban said.

The old town hall "needs at least $1 million to make the building suitable as a stand-alone facility," she added.

In the summer of 2002, while still the Ward 6 councillor, Mrs. Sherban made an attempt to have the old municipal building turned into a theatre and multi-purpose centre, combined with municipal offices, but the proposal was rejected by council.

For the immediate future, seniors will have their current building's interior spruced up.

Mrs. Sherban said she will be talking to the seniors group late in March about future plans.

"The leisure services master plan will draw out how many seniors are looking for what kind of possible uses," the mayor said.

The plan, which will be presented to council shortly, assessed the leisure needs of residents over the next five to 10 years.

More specific planning for the Memorial Park area, walking trails, newly purchased parkland on Bethesda Road and the land surrounding the Lebovic Leisure Centre will be launched under the Memorial Park master plan.

Open houses, meetings this spring and year-round discussions will give all residents, including seniors, a chance to give their input.

Although meeting space exists in seniors facilities around town, Mrs. Sherban said, "if you look for things like curling, banquet facilities or a seniors' library, we really have not met that need."

Ideas being discussed for a future seniors centre could involve combining curling and lawn bowling facilities either in a separate building or attached to the Lebovic Centre.

"I believe we can build something in this town," said Mr. Morley, former town councillor and candidate for mayor.

"There is the theatre, the arts group and the seniors club — I believe we can build something that can accommodate all of us."
