Markham Stouffville Hospital Foundation

PLATINUM SPONSORS OF HOSPITAL FOUNDATION GALA

Exco Technologies Limited

Exco Technologies is once again a Platinum Sponsor for the Markham Stouffville Hospital Foundation Gala. Exco believes in supporting the community and the local health care system, which in turn will benefit the company's 600 local employees. "We're a Markham based company," said Bonnie Cartwright, Executive Vice-President for Exco. "We are proud to support local health care and be a part of the community." Planting its roots in a small basement operation, Exco continued to grow until it blossomed into a highly successful business with revenues of well over $200 million a year. Recently, Exco celebrated its 50th anniversary. "The growth of Exco is a great success story. In 1952, A Canadian-born toolmaker named Harry Robbins started "moonlighting" after hours in his basement. Soon Robbins quit his full-time job to focus all his time and energy on his new project. The seeds of his labour have grown into a multi-faceted operation, well beyond its core business, extrusion tooling. Today, the business includes extrusion and die-casting, tooling as well as flexible storage and restraint systems for the automotive industry. The company has continued to move forward, powered by the hard work and dedication of 1,800 employees across 13 different entities, and includes Harry Robbins' own three sons. In 1975, Harry passed away, and the company began to struggle with its limited cash resources. However, one of Harry's sons, Brian, soon revitalized the business.

Exco now believes in giving back to the community that nurtured its amazing growth. "We make the Hospital a first priority," said Mrs. Cartwright. "It's a great feeling knowing that the money is well spent at the Hospital and the results can be seen and heard from our employees who might utilize the services of the Hospital from time to time." She added, "We believe that local representation is very important. As a Platinum Sponsor for this year's Gala, Exco has made a commitment of $15,000. In addition, Exco is a sponsor of the Markham Stouffville 5 km Legacy Run next month, and has reached out into the community to support other local charities and events."

Scotiabank

Scotiabank's history with the Markham Stouffville Hospital spans almost 20 years beginning in the early 1980's. One of North America's premier financial institutions and Canada's most international bank, Scotiabank is pleased to provide its support to the Hospital, which makes a difference in the lives of people in the community. "We have always been a significant sponsor because the Hospital is a cornerstone of our community," explained Warren Jestin, Senior Vice-President and Chief Economist of Scotiabank and a local Markham resident. "Our employees in the Markham branch have chosen to make the Hospital a main focus of fundraising efforts." Scotiabank has more than 960 branches across Canada with six branches in Markham and Stouffville. With approximately 48,000 employees, Scotiabank and its affiliates serve about 10 million customers in 50 countries worldwide. Last year, the Scotiabank Group contributed $30 million to various charities and community organizations across Canada and the world. "Scotiabank and our employees believe in community involvement," explained Mr. Jestin. "Right across the country, we support causes that our customers and staff are supportive of, such as the Markham Stouffville Hospital, one of the top-ranked Hospitals in the province." In 2003, Scotiabank was presented with the Benefactor Award for its enduring financial support of the Hospital. Scotiabank was also the leading corporate fundraiser providing $27,766 to the Hospital with support from the Team Scotia Community Program and is this year's Event Sponsor for the Markham Stouffville 5 km Legacy Run with a commitment of $30,000 over the next three years. For this year's Gala event, Scotiabank is a Platinum Sponsor, a $15,000 commitment. "The hospital needs funding to keep pace with the rapidly growing requirements of our community," said Mr. Jestin. "It's just one of the ways we give back. We're one of the major philanthropic givers in Canada and last year donated over 25 million coast to coast." With a diverse range of products and services including personal, commercial, corporate, and investment banking, Scotiabank continues to improve the financial lives of its customers.
