

Seniors love Stouffville bus service

From page 1.

Not many people get off the bus at the Lebovic Centre, according to staff. The bus, however, is quite popular with seniors.

Seniors from Parkview Village and the Eastern Gate Retirement Community find the bus handy for travelling to Markham Stouffville Hospital and for shopping.

'I have been using it two times a week. For me, it is the only way to get to the hospital.

The bus stop is outside the main entrance at Parkview Village on Ninth Line south.

It's convenient for residents who can wait inside until they see the bus approaching, program co-ordinator Jean Wing said.

She's heard people comment it's a cheaper way to travel by bus than by car and paying for gas and parking. It's a godsend to the increasing numbers of residents who can no longer drive, she said. Several of them use the bus to go to the A & P or to the bank.

The cash fare is $2.25 one way or 10 tickets for $21.

At Eastern Gate, there are two stops. Talks are in the works to see if more can be added. Representatives from York Region Transit have met with residents on several occasions and left bus schedules.

Resident Jean Wray has found the bus extremely handy for getting to regular treatments at the hospital.

The bus is on time, she said. "I have been using it two times a week," she said. "For me, it is the only way to get to the hospital."

On one of her trips last week, there were "at least four of us," she said, "the most I've ever seen yet."

Most were seniors, but a group of school-aged children also got on.
