Girls party for moraine

Stouffville residents Jesse Cook, Sydney Mann and Jess Bartle, all 12 years old, decided they didn't need presents for their June birthdays, so they asked guests for $5 donations to the Oak Ridges Moraine Land Trust.

By the time the last balloon had been popped and the last piece of birthday cake eaten, $405 had been collected for the trust fund.

The girls celebrated their birthdays together on Saturday with about 60 guests.

They are the youngest people to donate to the cause, said Susan Lloyd Swail, the executive director of the ORMLT.

"It is wonderful that at such a young age, they are learning about the moraine and they have such initiative," she added.

"The three of them had talked about the different charities they wanted to support," L. J. Bartle, Jess' mom, said. "All three feel very strongly about preserving green space."

The girls are outdoors much of the time for sports and activities. Jess and Jessie are soon heading to Camp Temagami, a wilderness camp. While there last summer, the girls travelled 100 km by canoe.

They play softball and are involved in track and field.

Jess keeps in shape for downhill ski racing by running and mountain biking. They also play hockey in the winter.

Oak Ridges Moraine staff brought a display and brochures to set up at the party.

It costs about $200 to protect an acre of land with a conservation easement, Ms Lloyd Swail said. The land trust works with private property owners.
