

Hair today, gone tomorrow times three

Geralde Reesor-Grooters and her two daughters won't have long flowing locks any more, but some other children who have lost their hair through cancer treatments, fire and other conditions, will.

The local resident and Janien, age seven, and five-year-old Mara had their hair cut free of charge this week at Headlines Hair Styling at 6328 Main St. in Stouffville to make 10-inch pony tails.

Mrs. Reesor-Grooters is challenging Whitchurch-Stouffville residents to make similar hair donations for an organization call Locks of Love, based in Florida.

Ponytails or braids have to be 10 inches or longer, clean and dry and cut above the elastic band holding the hair. The hair can't be chemically damaged or bleached.

The service benefits those 18 and younger.

It takes about four months to create a wig, Mrs. Reesor-Grooters said, and requires from six to 10 pony-tail donations.

She was inspired by a young person at her church, Community Mennonite, who donated her hair to the organization. Mrs. Reesor-Grooters is also donating a pony tail she had cut several years ago.

Anyone who wishes to donate their hair should log on to www.locksoflove.org for more information.
