For real estate professional Stephen Tar, life has always been the greatest classroom of all. In fact, one of his earliest and most indelible lessons was found out on the frozen ponds and rivers of Markham/Unionville.

From the time he was five years old, his brother dragged him out to skate and play hockey with kids several years older than he. Despite their size and skills, Stephen was never intimidated. He relished the challenge of pushing himself to compete at their level. These early trials sparked a love of sports that would last a lifetime and instilled the competitive edge that would allow him to excel both on and off the ice.

Today, that competitive "Edge" is the reason why Stephen continues to remain a true leader in local real estate. It's also the competitive advantage that allows his clients to get the most value out of their real estate opportunities. Put "The Edge" on your side during your next move by calling Stephen Tar today.
