

Girls only at Summitview program

BY HANNELORE VOLPE
Staff Writer

Every Tuesday afternoon in Stouffville, a group of eight and nine-year-old girls make volcanoes, lava lamps and something called outrageous ooze.

The Operation Smart (R) activities are part of the Girls Inc. program at Summitview Public School, the only school taking part in the program in Whitchurch-Stouffville.

The fact most of the children walk to the Main Street school makes it easier for them to stay for the program, which goes from 3:15 to 4:45 p.m., facilitator Jackie Gallo said.

Girls Inc. was formerly known as Big Sisters of York. The idea behind Operation Smart

(R) is for the girls to have a sense of accomplishment once they have finished the science or math activity and have discussed the science behind it.

... Operation Smart (R) is for the girls to have a sense of accomplishment once they've finished the science or math activity ...

The program allows them "to know they can do anything", Ms Gallo said.

It's open to girls in grades 3 to 5. In one exercise, the girls are asked to draw a scientist and talk about the fact girls, as well as boys, can do this type of work.

"It gets them thinking outside the box," Ms Gallo said.

In the information and registration packages Ms Gallo left at Summitview in the fall is the Girls' Bill of Rights and a list of the Girls Inc. programs.

They include the Big Sister program, matching a young girl with a woman 18 and older to befriend her, Girls in Motion for four to 11-year-olds and youth leadership for those 12 to 18, which focuses on areas such as employment, self-esteem and social issues.
